It is the more important that the pulpit be heard on this subject at this time when we are having such an illimitable discussion about what is called the new woman, as thouch some new creature of God had arjived on earth or were about to arrive. One theory is that she will be an athlete, and boxing glove and football and putilistic encounter will characterize her. Another theory is that she will superintend ballot boxes, sit in Congressional hall and, throuch improved politics, bring the millenium by the evil she will extirpate and the good she will install. Another theory is that she will adopt masculine attire and make sacred a ulcarianism positively horrific. Another theory is that she will be so esshetic that the will be pictorialized with tints from son-skies or suggestions of Rembrandt and Banhae!

Heaven deliver the church and the world from any one of these styles of new woman! She will ne'er come: I-have so-such faith in the evangelistic triumph and in the pro-gress of all things in the right direction that I prophesy that style of new woman will never arrive. She would hand over this world to diabolism, and from being, as she is now, the mightiest agency for the world's uplifting, she would be the mightiest force for its downthrust.

They may law been keen at long time beek, but they have been a health and time out they have been a health and the beek, but they have been a health and golf and the bicycle. It always seemed strangs and inscrubble that our human race should be so importance have powers of valouity, wing of bird or foot of antelope, leaving us far behind, and while it seems so importance have powers of valouity, wing of bird or foot of antelope, leaving us far behind, and while it seems so important that we be in many places in a shortwist with the work while we were weighed down with incapacities, and most men if they run a mile at exhausted or dead from the exhaustion. I was left until the last lecade of the nin-itental century to give the aspend which we see whirling through all our cities and alous the country roads, and with that some owner health. The woman of the new of the world was created, while the lavalities which has so often characterized woman-hood will pass over to manhood which by its nosture on the wheel is comitted or curred. Advice the third: Appreciate your mother while you have her. It is the almost universal testimony of young women who have lost mother that they did not realize what she was to them until after her exit from this life. Indeed mother is in the appreciation of many a young lady a hindrance. The maternal inspection is often considered an obstacle. Mother has so many colions about that which is proper and what which is improper. It is astounding how much more many girls know at eighteen than their mothers at forty-due. With what an about the same than the control of the colling. The springly with some temmer, the youngling tries to reverse the opinion of the old ling. The springly and indication to the recent graduate of the female seminary that the circumstances of to-day or to-night are not fully appreciated.

What a wise boarding school that would be if the mothers were the pupils and the first the mothers were the pupils and the daughters the teachers! How well the teas could chaperon the fifties! Then mothers do not amount to much anyhow. They are in the way and are always asking questions about no stages marks of lotters, and asking, "Who is that Mary D.?" and "Whore did you get that ring, Myra?" For mothers about postage marks of lora?" and "Whore did you get that ring, Myra?" For mothers have such underscelented means of knowing everything—they say "it was a bird in the air." Will not some one lift his gau and shoot it? It would take whole libraries to hold the wisdom which the daughter knows more than her mother. "Why cannot I have this?" "Why cannot I do that?" An and the question in many a groun has been, although not plainly stated: "What shall we do with the mothers, anyhow? They are so far behind the times." Permit me to suggest that if the mother and less time to looking after you she would have been as fully up to date as you, in music, in style of galt, in asshrict taskes and in all sorts of information. I expect that while you were studying botany and chemistry and embroidery and the new opera sho was studying aboushold cooncomics. THE FALLEN NAPOLEON.

All Had Turned Against Him When He Finally Left Paris.

He Finally Left Paris.

It was a stubborn fight with fate that went on in the gilded Elysian Palace in the street of St. Honore in those bright days of a Paris June. An emperor was trying the hard task of ruling his own spirit; a conqueror was set to the bitter struggle of conquering himself. Than this there is no harder task in all the world, whether for boy or emperor.

or emperor.

And, in this fight, allies were not to and, in this ngir, almost were ally were be depended upon; foes really were friends. For the first would have tempt friends. For the first would have tempted the overpowered monarch to stand at bay against victorious Europe and distrusting France; the others were determined to drive him from France at all hazards. And, in his case, to go was his only safety; though had fred defight.

all hazards. And, in his case, to shall his only safety; though had he died fighting for his lost crown, history would have given him even greater glory. Then came the end, when his ministers set themselves up to be his masters; when those he had most richly rewarded became his keenest foes; when France refused to acknowledge as its ruler a man twice overthrown; when from those to whom he looked for counsel came only lukewarm loyalty, faise protestations, or unwelcome truth; when from anger at the unreliable Chamber of Deputies, whom he, like Cromwell, threatened to turn-out "neck

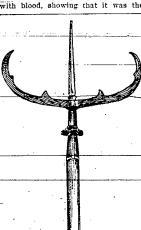

Chamber of Deputies, whom he, like Cromwell, threatened to turn out "neck and heels," he would change to indecision, silence, even timidity, it was plain there was but one thing to do. He did it. On the twenty-second of June, 1815, Napoleon signed a second abdication, proclaimed his little son, whom Austria had kidnaped, Emperor of the French, and three days later left Parls forever.

He drove to Malmaison, twelve miles from Parls, that beautiful estate, half from Paris, that beautiful estate, half palace, half villa, which had been the home of the Empress Josephine. Here Napoleon had spent many happy hours Napoleon had spent many happy income in his days of power and prosperity; here Josephine had died while he was at Elba; here the Emperor had planned out his greatest campalgns, his most plorious victories; and here Philip came to him.-St. Nicholas.

And She Was Too

A writer in the Paris Temps tells a story of an English army surgeon nam-ed Macleod, "a grave, skillful, wise and reserved practitioner." His comrades sometimes railled him on his sobriety and continence, but he replied only with a shrug of the shoulders. One day, in India, a lieutenant of his mess day, in India, a lieutenant of his mess jokingly said that he lived like a young lady. Macleod jumped from his chart and skapped the officer in the face. A duel followed and the lieutenant was shot. The surgeon then resigned and returned to England! Upon his death, some years later, it was found that the eurgeon was a woman, and among her papers were found some showing that she was a member of one of the oldest families in Great Britain.
