Notwithstanding the hard rain storm of last Sunday, services of interest were held last Sunday morning and evening, and if report be true, the largest congregation in town were in the Baptist church.

The Baracas and their friends held a social at the residence of the teacher, Mrs. A. M. Burrows, last Monday evening. A fine time and at the close refreshments. It was one of the pleasures not soon forgotten.

The Missionary Circle held their annual picnic at the home of Mrs. John Nichols on Tuesday afternoon. Bright sky, bright faces and a determination to enlarge the activity of Christian service, were the results aside from the pleasant social hours spent. The Kingdom of our Lord would be soon extended to the Earth, were all as active and earnest as our Missionary Circle of women.

Services Sunday at usual hours. Morning sermon, subject, "Freedom by the Truth." Evening special patriotic service, a Fourth of July sermon. Union service, all invited.

Do not neglect the prayer meeting, Thursday at 7:45 p. m.

And covenant meeting, Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Children's Day a week from Sunday, July 9th. A fine program of children's exercises.

A large demand for the "Aged Pilgrims," the sermon preached by the pastor June 8th, exhausted the supply. Extra copies have been obtained and all will be supplied by request.

JOHN TRAINOR,

ANDOVER, N. Y.

The Isthmian Waterway.

It is a matter of gratification to the American people that congress has at last authorized the construction of an isthmian waterway to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. People generally had little choice as to the route. They wanted the best and the most feasible route, and this they were willing to leave to the judgment of the government authorities and navigation experts.

Congress has, however, after long and exhaustive consideration decided in favor of the Panama route, provided good and sufficient title thereto can be secured by the president. With this decision the public generally is satisfied, since it means that the isthmian waterway will be built by either the Panama or the Nicaragua route, as the canal bill as finally passed authorizes the appointment of an isthmian canal commission and the issuance of government bonds in the sum of $180,000,000 for the construction of the canal and provides that should the president be unable to obtain for the United States a satisfactory title to the property of the New Panama Canal company and the control of the necessary territory of the republic of Colombia and the rights within a reasonable time and upon reasonable terms then the president, having first obtained for the United States perpetual control by treaty of the necessary territory from Costa Rica and Nicaragua, upon terms which he may consider reasonable, for the construction, perpetual maintenance, operation and protection of a canal connecting the Caribbean sea with the Pacific ocean by what is commonly known as the Nicaragua route, shall through said isthmian canal commission cause to be excavated and constructed a ship canal and waterway from a point on the shore of the Caribbean sea near Greytown, by way of Lake Nicaragua, to a point near Brito on the Pacific ocean.

Thus it would seem that the great enterprise upon which the American people have set their hearts is to be consummated. It has taken a long time to bring about this assurance, and much strong opposition, particularly from the powerful transcontinental railway corporations, had to be overcome, but now that the building of a canal has been authorized the people hope to see the work upon it pushed forward as speedily and economically as is consistent with good engineering upon an enterprise of such great magnitude and importance.

There is a general impression, which many people believe that they have verified by personal experience, that electric light is more trying to the eyes than most other kinds of artificial illumination, though a Russian specialist who has been conducting a series of experiments to determine the point declares that the impression is wrong. He started with the theory that weariness and damage to the eye by any light are proportioned to the frequency with which the eye is closed while exposed to that light, and he found that in ordinary conditions people with normal eyes winked 6.8 times a minute while working by candlelight, 2.8 times with gaslight, 2.2 with sunlight and only 1.8 times with electric light. Accepting his premises—and it seems to be a reasonable one on the whole—the electric light must be acquitted of the only fault that anybody has ever found with it. However, the course of the demonstration is not conclusive, and a good many people will remain unconvinced that electric light is better even than sunlight.

A New England widow, fair and forty, has received a verdict of $50,000 damages for being cast off by the man who promised to relieve her of the solitude of widowhood. This is a pretty good sized lump for wounded affections, but it may be mentioned in justification of the verdict that she was a handsome widow and that the faithless swain was worth $5,000,000. The average jury can generally be depended upon to treat a pretty widow handsomely. Why not?

The Humbert picture sale in Paris brought no less than $120,000, which was about three times the estimated value of the pictures. Still the creditors of the departed swindlers are several millions out of pocket. They will have to recoup themselves with their experience.

Possibly if the extradition proceedings are kept up Captains Greene and Gaynor may be kept in jail in Canada long enough to punish them adequately for their alleged misdeeds in the United States.

The fraternal organization whose supreme lodge has just announced that a Spaniard is a white man would hardly have dared to report a finding of that nature a couple of years ago.

If the college graduate will take a small part of the advice which has been given him during the commencement days, he ought to be very happy and prosperous.

Science with all its power has thus far been unable to exact from Mont Pelee and La Soufriere any promises of good behavior in the future.

Destructive Flood Rampant in Andover

Great Damage Done to Crops and Lands. Mill Pond Dam Goes Out. Pigs, Calves and Chickens Washed Down Stream.

$3,000 WILL NOT COVER THE DAMAGE IN ANDOVER.

Telegraph and Telephone Service Interrupted, Rollins Iron Bridge Entirely Demolished. Big Erie Railroad Bridge at Scio Washed Out. Alfred Meets Same Dose.

When the people of this place awakened last Sunday morning, it was a sorry looking Andover that met their gaze. It rained every day last week. The "cold water" advocates saw all of that beverage they cared for for once. No complaints were heard in all that week that the corporation water system supply was insufficient for the requirements of the people. Water was a drug on the market. The ground became so thoroly saturated with it before Friday morning that Old Mother Earth refused point blank to swallow another drop. Still it rained. Saturday several hard showers came to enliven(?) things. By Saturday night the banks of all the streams were filled with the muddy, angry water, impatiently beating on either side to find some weak spot to escape from the confines of the creek channels. Yet at bedtime no great apprehension of danger from high water was anticipated by our people as the indications were that the rain was nearly over, and most of them slept soundly until daylight. At about midnight the storm seemed to take a new lease of life, and the rain came down in great big chunks, rather than drops, and continued so to come until almost 4 o'clock. The water had to go somewhere, and as the creeks were full to overflowing it came running down the hillsides, thru the fields and meadows, washing out crops and leaving in their lieu great gravel beds, doing thousands of dollars of damage to our farmers, completely spoiling many village lawns and gardens. It was the most severe storm this section has seen since the historic floods of June, 1889 and September, 1890.

DAMAGE DONE.

Only a partial list of the damage done by the storm can be given, for in fact nearly every one had some tale of woe to sing of damage done to their property. The greater part of it in consequence of the heavy body of water coming down the East Valley creek and choking up the little measly throat of the railroad bridge where the Erie railroad crosses that stream. This forced the water to back up and overflow the valuable farm lands lying in close proximity thereto belonging to G. M. Barney, washing out his meadows and crops and piling drittwood and [illegible]rubbish all over his property, ripping up all of his sidewalk on Church street, carrying them across the road and digging great holes in the highway.

G. N. Robbins' property on Church street was all afloat until noon or after. Mr. Robbins had a fine lot of early vegetables, and a large quantity of small fruits, all in as fine a condition as years of experience and a season's hard work could make them. They are now all ruined. There is no question but that Messrs. Barney and Robbins have a clear damage case against the Erie railroad.

The water from this same creek came into the house of Charles Hawkins and stood six inches deep all over the first floor of his residence on upper Water street, spoiling carpets and damaging his household goods.

The gardens of Charles Crandall and many others in that locality are ruined.

DYKE CREEK SUFFERERS.

No less violent was the action of the Dyke Creek. The Rollins Iron Bridge was washed out by it, and bent into more than seven hundred different angles, putting entirely out of mind any idea of repairing it. When this bridge went down the entire heft of it went with terrific force against the 5½ gas line of the Mutual Gas Co., breaking it in two as tho it were but a tow string. The people, however, using their gas were saved the annoyance of being out of gas, as other lines supplied gas in sufficient quantity to furnish all patrons.

Numerous village gardens along this stream were inundated, and are sorry looking specimens to-day. A calf, four pigs and chickens without number were washed down the creek, and their pens and coops helped to swell the rubbish that made life a burden to those living below.

Had it not been for a large log becoming lodged in the bend of this stream on the Church property up by the "Narrows," thus preventing the water from eating into the bank at that point, much more damage would have been suffered than is now felt, as nothing else was in the way of the main current of the creek comjog down the center of the highway on Greenwood street.

PART OF THE MILL DAM GOES OUT.

Early in the morning it became evident that the Mill Pond dam owned by G. E. Brown was liable to give way at any moment, and for a few hours the look of anxiety could be seen on the faces of all, especially those owning property along the natural water course it would be liable to follow. Fortune, however, favored them, as the dam gave way so gradual that no particular damage was done by it. The pond was not entirely drained, as but a couple of feet from off the top of the dam was washed away. The water from that source combined with that that could work its way thru the railroad bridge overflowed the Owen, Church and Cannon property on Elm street, and was several feet deep on Main street down nearly to the postoffice, early in the morning.

COMSTOCK BRIDGE IN DANGER.

At about 10 o'clock in the morning the unceasing beating of the torrent of water upon the abutments of the Comstock bridge on North Main street caused them to begin crumbling, and but for the zealous and efficient work of President Lever and Commissioner Smith, with that of their men, that structure would soon have been in a pile of ruins.

BELOW TOWN.

The damage done to property on the flat lands below town was even greater than that done in the village as they had the water of all three streams to contend with. The farther down the stream you go greater is the damage done.

The beautiful truck gardens of A. E. Starr are completely spoiled, and with them goes the labor of not only this season but much of that of former years, as the washing of rubbish, and gravel op to finely, prepared plats for early gardeniug can be aught but ruinous to both crops and lands.

J. W. Richardson, Chas. Robinson, Clark Boyd, the Dean boys and many others are heavy losers from damage to crops. Nature has done a large portion of their haying for them, not just as they would like it done, perhaps, but done so thoroly they need give themselves little trouble to finish it.

Butter tubs and beer kegs might have been seen afloat in many a cellar in this village.

At 7,o'clock in the morning the telegraph and telephone lines from all points were entirely cut off and communication was impossible for hours. In fact they are not all in working order yet.

THE ERIE RAILROAD.

The last mail train to pass thru Andover was train 8 Saturday night. From that time until Monday noon no mail arrived or departed from the Andover postoffice.

The last passenger train to pass thru town was train 3 at 12:30 a. m., and it was stalled at Wellsville and compelled to remain there until the track was in shape back to Hornellsville when it backed up to that city and went over the Buffalo division.

The grading was badly washed out all along the line from Tip Top to Friendship.

The work trains arrived as far as the pond from Hornellsville at about 10:30, and Supt. Goldsboro and Roadmaster Bowen walked into Andover, where they chartered Mulcahy's express and proceeded down the line to investigate the damage done below.

IN OTHER PLACES.

Andover people, however, were fortunate in that she is situated only two or three miles from the headwaters. At Tip Top the waters divide and run either way, so all the water we had to care for was that falling between that place and here. Those living below and along the Genesee River valley are truly to be pitted.

The big railroad bridge at Scio is washed out, and it will be days yet before trains can go safely over that stream.

It is reported that at Wellsville a general alarm was given and the entire population was called out to protect property.

At Elm Valley the water was terrific.

Four bridges were washed out up the valley above U. W. Stratton's place.

At Alfred much damage is reported. The large bridge over the Canacadea creek is gone at the Station. At the village above two solid stone arch bridges are ruined, one of them being on the beautiful college campus grounds on University street. The dressing on their fine macadam road between that place and the station is washed entirely off down to the cobble stones. That damage alone will amount to nearly or over $1,000 as the road had just received a new dressing.

The grocery store and warehouse of Scoville, Brown & Co., at Wellsville, was flooded and the stock damaged to the extent of $4,000. The houses on the east and west banks of the Genesee river were from two to 10 feet under water. About 50 families were rescued in boats and one woman in the ward annex was rescued from a second story window. The damage to crops will amount to several thousand dollars.

Over twenty bridges are out in the town of Amity, including three iron bridges on the Phillips Creek road, and the highways are washed badly in many sections. The damage to crops along the river is almost beyond estimation and will run into thousands of dollars.
