THE "LONDON CRAVENETTE"

We take pleasure to announce a complete showing of the most up-to-date Raincoat and Outdoor Garment for all occasions, with particularly strong merits as to quality and style.

WHY THESE EXCEL.

First—Because Priestley's fabrics and their Cravenette process are used exclusively in the manufacture of the garments, which assures the highest standard of waterpoofing and a guarantee to give full satisfaction to the wearer.

Second—The style of the "London Cravenette" has been adopted by all smart dressers as being so much more graceful and swagger than the full length belted Raincoat, which is quite passe.

Third—The length of the London Coat is much more comfortable to walk in, does not gather dust and dirt, and is therefore hygenic in its principal.

The London "Cravenette" Garments have many imitations. Every genuine garment has the registered trade mark stamped on the inside. Look for it.

Team Ran Away.

On Sunday Davis Webster, Miss Sworts and Miss Boies were sleighriding behind Davis' trotters, and in crossing the railroad at Wm. Blair's the doubletree broke and the team, thereby released, started on a lively run toward home. They were going so fast at the Pease bridge that they could not make the turn onto the bridge and went over the bank at the north side of the bridge where they were found in a promiscous heap, unable to extricate themselves without help which was soon on the ground.

When the horses started the movement threw Miss Boies out in the snow but fortunately both driver, passengers and team escaped without serious injury.

"Don't be Late."

The New York & Pennsylvania Railway Company wishes to notify its patrons that they will be pleased to send to them theater tickets (choice seats) for "Little Johnny Jones" at the Shattuck Opera House, Hornellsville, N. UNPROFITABLE FEEDING

Intelligent stock raisers know that a certain amount of feed is necessary to keep an animal alive. They might feed that amount as long as it lives, and it would never gain a pound.

There is no profit in that kind of feeding. The kind that pays is the kind that builds flesh rapidly. If it takes twenty pounds of food each day to keep a sheep alive, twenty-five pounds a day will make it gain flesh. It's the extra five that brings the profit. The first five pounds amounts to nothing, nor does the second or third or fourth five pounds.

It's the same way with advertising. You have to do a certain amount to overcome the resistance of the public.

You have to do a certain amount of advertising to make them wake up to the fact that you are in business at all. You have to pay a certain amount to keep your advertising alive. What you pay above that amount brings profit.

Some advertisers fail because they do not use enough space. They use barely enough or sometimes not quite enough to make the advertising self sustaining. A little bit more would make it profitable. It is better to advertise a little too much than not quite enough.—Charles Austin Bates.

Some of our advertisers could enlarge their space with profit.

SUCCESSFUL CO-OPERATION

Like an Oasis—A Refreshing Item of the Commerce of To-day.

In these days of trusts, communities of interest and other gigantic combinations of capital, it is refreshing to know that, although only a little over three years old, the United Drug Company, a co-operative concern, better known by their products, the Rexall Remedies, have already attained fame throughout a whole continent and the advent of the year 1906 not only finds them still forging upward and to the front in that an immense additional laboratory is under way in building in their home city, Boston, but also find them following Horace Greely's famous admonition, "go West" in that also a sub-laboratory and storage warehouse, on a gigantic scale, has just been opened under special auspices at 45-47 Randolph street, Chicago, brought about by the call from the people of the great West, saying "Come out here and help us;" so in three years the United Drug Co. have rightly laid claim to a high place among the manufacturers of the country, and now even more than ever before attain to a pre-eminence as makers and marketers for a unique line of medicines never attempted before. The United Drug Co. is strictly a co-operative enterprise. The funds for its starting and the pluck and courage to push it to so successful an issue have not been the production of capitalists, but of the one thousand druggists in the one thousand towns and cities where the Remedies are exclusively sold, who had, and still have, unbounded faith in the great future of the United Drug Co. and Rexall Remedies.

Keeping constantly at it is the key to successful advertising.

You cannot spurt much and win. A business career that goes by fits and starts will not pay so well in the long run as a business that follows a course mapped out for it and keeps increasing its advertising as the business demands it until the maximum is reached. There is a maximum for a small business beyond which it is not economy or policy to go.—Brookline Chronicle.

Our columns furnish the key to successful advertising in this community.

LATE SPEAKER NIXON.

Memorial Exercises Filled the Great Assembly Chamber.

SPEAKER WADSWORTH PRESIDED

Mrs. Nixon and Her Children and Other Members of the Late Speaker's Family Present—The Formal Memorial Address Was Made by Lewis E. Carr of Albany.

Albany, March 28.—The assembly of the state of New York with the senate, the governor and other state officers and representatives of the court of appeals and other courts, in the presence of an audience completely filling the great assembly chamber and representing all parts of the state, last night formally honored the memory of Samuel Frederick Nixon of Westfield, who for 15 years represented in the legislature the Second assembly district of Chautauqua county and for seven consecutive years, exceeding all previous speakership records, served as speaker of the assembly. There is no doubt that had he lived he would have been speaker again this winter.

After the audience had gathered the members, present and former, of the assembly; the senators, the elective and appointive state officers, the members of the judiciary and finally Governor Higgins and his secretary, Frank E. Perley, the latter a very close friend of Speaker Nixon, marched into the assembly chamber in the order given and were seated in the well.

Mrs. Nixon and her children, as well as other members of the late speaker's family, were present and occupied the speaker's room beside the rostrum.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. George L. McClellan of Westfield, who was Speaker Nixon's family pastor, and appropriate songs were sung by a local quartette. Assemblyman James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of Livingston, who succeeded Mr. Nixon, presided and made a brief address.

Speaker Wadsworth Presided.

Speaker Wadsworth began with the statement that the tribute of the people of the state of New York to the memory of Speaker Nixon represented in the gathering was richly deserved and that a study of the man, "cursory though it must be in this all too brief moment, will afford an inspiration of undoubted value as we strive to accomplish the tasks set before us."

"For 14 years," said the speaker, "he sat in this chamber and labored for the state; each year saw his power and influence increase; his remarkable knowledge of all the intricacies of government, legislative and executive, his wise conservatism, his unerring faculty of foreseeing the needs of the state, his sturdy common sense and his grim courage, won for him the applause and the confidence of the people.

"For seven years there rested upon his shoulders a large share of the responsibility for success or failure of the law making body. The strength of our government today, the excellence of our institutions and the unhampered growth of our industries, bear eloquent testimony to the ability with which he bore his share of that burden. These things are known of all men—these things the people know.

"Few, by comparison, are those, however, who know what the real secret of his power was; the devoted family, the neighbors at Westfield, the men of Albany—they know. A friend of his has said that he had the stature and mentality of a man, and tender heart of a woman. If this can be said of any man, it can be said and said truly of him.

"The steadfast friendship of man with man was what he prized most in his life here; his kindly sympathy was extended to all about him no matter how humble their station; after the manner of a child, almost, he yearned for evidences of affection and confidence on the part of his co-workers. And when men came and laid before him their confidences, their ambitions, their hopes and their fears, a responsive chord was struck in his breast, his helping hand was stretched forth and he rejoiced. Those moments were to him the best of life.

"What wonder is it that men anxiously sought his advice and willingly followed where he led? In the tender qualities of his heart lay the true secret of his leadership. And so as we pause in our work and look back upon him the thought which brings to us the tenderest recollections and best inspiration is the memory of the great heart of the great speaker."

Lewis E. Carr's Memorial Address.

The formal memorial address was by Lewis E. Carr, the wellknown lawyer-orator of Albany. His speech was in his best vein.

The assembly chamber was appropriately decorated with black and with knotted flags and palms.

Assemblymen Hammond of Onondaga, Grattan of Albany, Murphy of Kings, Young of New York, Burns of New York and Lynch of Erie acted as ushers.

The committee in charge consisted of Chairman Rogers and Assemblymen George M. Palmer of Schoharie, James K. Apgar of Westchester, Arthur C. Wade of Chautauqua and Jesse S. Phillips of Allegany.

Weather Indications.

Snow flurries Wednesday; Thursday fair; fresh west to northwest winds.

Making Medicine History

Several years ago, a thousand of the leading druggists throughout the United States organized themselves together in a co-operative company to produce remedies which they could back up with their own names and their own reputations.

The first object of this co-operative company was to produce a line of remedies that every druggist would know thoroughly. There were to be no secret formulas; the ingredients of every remedy would be known to every druggist.

Each of these thousand druggists contributed to the organization all that his knowledge and experience had brought to him in the way of advice as to different remedies. The formulas of something like 2,000 or more remedies were sent to the company. A committee of experts was appointed and this committee went over the various formulas conscientiously and earnestly for a long period of time and selected from the entire list about 200 standard remedies, the manufacture of which the company then undertook.

The company in the meantime had erected a perfect laboratory—large, well-appointed, with every appliance known to modern skill. The combined capital of a thousand druggists made it possible for the company to purchase in the largest quantities the fundamental drugs and herbs, etc., that form the ingredients of the various remedies.

This meant not only the highest quality in manufacture, but the very greatest economy—the cutting out of every wasteful item and every unnecessary expense.

The remedies when manufactured were shipped directly from the laboratory to the retail druggists. This insured their freshness and made it impossible for their quality to deteriorate. Not only that, but it also did away with the jobbers' profit. Here again the co-operative system added not only quality but brought about economy.

Most of our patrons are familiar with these facts. Most of them are already acquainted with the formulas of Rexall Remedies which are manufactured by the United Drug Co., with laboratory and principal offices in Boston, Mass. These are the remedies and this is the co-operative company that we believe has done more to bring about a change in patent medicine conditions than any other element in existence.

Each of the Rexall druggists knows absolutely what each Rexall remedy contains. He has the formula of each remedy on file in his safe. He will gladly give it to anyone who is interested. There is nothing secret about any of the Rexall formulas. On the contrary, we are thoroughly proud of them. We want you to know about them.
