The True Purpose of Imprisoning Criminals By EUGENE SMITH, Famous Criminologist

T is not easy to see how punishment ever came to be regarded as an EXPIATION for crime. The expiatory nature of suffering depends on its VOLUNTARINESS. Yet this absurb idea is the only ground on which a dangerous criminal is now discharged after a CERTAIN TERM of imprisonment.

Public protection is the only motive which justifies the state depriving a criminal of his liberty, revenge being wholly alien to its majesty. But imprisonment that is not reformatory insures protection ONLY WHILE IT LASTS. Therefore we can protect ourselves from the criminal only by life imprisonment or by reformation, appearance of some of the streets in nearly every other respect are guilty and reformation seems to be more humane, besides being less exthe weeds are allowed to grow rank and tall."
