There is no ir lege, and as a spider has eight he I A butterflies, beetles and wasps and Even to his nearest relatives he bears ize that acorpions and horseshoe crabs must call him cousin we perceive that Nature has provided spiders with an organ filled always with liquid, which on being exposed to the air hardens and can be drawn out into the slender threads which we know as cobweb. The silkworm incases its body with a mile or more of gleaming silk, but there its usefulness is ended, as far as the silkworm is concerned. But spiders have found a hundred uses fo their cordage, some of which are startlingly similar to human inventions. A list of all the uses of cobwebs get. Most of the time the would take much space, but of these ing. Such a variety of good unwary flies—the wonderfully ingenlous webs which sparkle with dew among the grasses or stretch from bush to bush. The framework is of webbing, and upon this is woven the sticky spiral which is so elastic, so ethereal and yet strong enough to entangle good sized insect. How knowing seems the little worker as, the web and his den of concealment being completed he spins a strong cable from the center of the web to the entrance of his watentower. Then, when a trembling f his aerial spans warns him of a capture, how eagerly he seizes his maste. cable and jerks away on it, thus vibrating the whole structure and making Those spiders which leap upon their prev instead of setting snares for have still a use for their threads of life, throwing out a cable as they leap to break their fall if they miss their foothold. What a strange use of the cobweb is that of the little flying spiders! Up they run to the top of a post, elevate their abdomens and run out several threads, which longthen and lengthen until the breeze catches them, and away goes the wingless aeronaut for yards or for miles, as fortune may dictate! We wonder if he can cut loose or pull in his balloon cables

A most fascinating tale would unfold could we discover all the uses of cobweb when the spiders themselves are through with it. Certain it is that our ruby throated humming bird robs many webs to fasten together the plant down and lichens which compose her dainty habits, but breathing a bubble of air which he carries about with him. When his supply is low, he swims to a submarine castle of silk, so air tight that he can keep it filled with a large
