ADVERTISING AN ART.

But It Should Be Made an Art That Calls Beauty to Its Service. Advertising has indeed become as art. It remains for it to become, if not a fine art, at least an art that calls beauty to its service. When it does, much of the energy that is now misnow prodigally wasted in destroying the world's beauty, will be saved. The right procedure is indicated by the most conspicuous medium for public advertising. The press, in its daily, weekly or monthly forms, offers altogether the best means for calling pubic attention to all sorts of things. The best of public journals—those which are recognized as the most desirable mediums for advertising and which consequently obtain the highest prices for their services—make it a rule to classify and restrict in a judicious - Danner the advertisements that they print. They confine them to certain
