"YESTERDAY."

· Some one has said that it is a crime to be living in the past. Yet how many people there are who spend most of their time talking and living in "yesterday." How strange it is, after all, but on the other side i of the thought "yesterday" is all right if it gives an inspiration and purpose for today; helping us in the correction of errors and making today a better day than the day before.

Along that line the Andover of "yesterday" was a long way inferior to the Andover of today, because somebody saw a great need and went pulgging, not satisfied with the conditions, and sought to change them. Wnat was the result? A better, more progressive and wide awake business community, ready to pull things together and make tomorrow better than today. For instance, it was only "yesterday" that we were all plugging for a new school house and industries, and we got them, and today we are happy, contented and thriving and the old bugbear of taxes that seemed so great is passing.

Do you know what made today in Andover what it is? It was "yes ! terday's" grit and oneness of purpose. Everybody plugged and pushed | and results were accomplished that seemed impossible. Andover never i had a "75", but the good citizens, guided by a "Business Men's Asso- | ciation" (by the way, what has become of it?) declared a declaration of independence over a dead past and the idea caught fire. We believe the spirit still survives and the future will be better and full of rich industrial promise, and commercial enterprise because the men of "yesterday" | were at the scene of action. The better days of activity are coming, days of cooler weather, when the blood will tingle and the spirit of "lets do | something" will be in the air. Would it not be a fine thing if all to- ] gether men would catch the bouyant spirit of "yesterday" and do something for Andover's future? Andover hasn't reached her limit-by no means. There are opportunities here for a big forward move. But it will never be accomplished by living in the past, only as "yesterday" gives inspiration for today to make it a bigger tomorrow.

"MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS."

That is not said in a critical sense. It's meant to convey the thought that if every person would be persistent and energetic in attending to their own affairs and strive to make their own life tell, and plug along about the details of their own life, things would go smoother. Cromwell said: "The best soldiers are those who put their heart into it!" You will find that true about ctilizenship as well. It's strange, but somebody is always "butting in," (That's what the boys call it on the streets) the affair of folks that is of no immediate concern, and often they are doing irrepairable injuries to others by the everlasting American habit. There is a sense in which your business is nobody else's business and he is a wise man who finds the level and walks in it. There is a young man and young woman, or perhaps an older pair, walking together on the street. They have a perfect right to do so. Their purways breeding impurities only fit-for a trunk sewer or a garbage disposal plant, starts a story. Well you known the rest. Mind your own business. That's wrong. Some poor jealous mortal starts the story and often it's years before the lie chaser can be cauht up with.

That's enough of that kind of moralizing. What we want to say is that there is a great future, we believe, for Andover, and also believe it is the business of every man, woman and child to get busy and boost, by making it a business to talk Andover's character up. Did you know | that villages have character as well as men and women? Don't believe it? Ask some of the commercial travelers along the line. They will tell you about it. Business character, and moral character. Now don't you let anybody fool you about it. Every idle tale you start gets a ] hearing. Start a string of tales about the opportunities for Andover. The good people of the place. Point out the men of integrity. Hold, them up in the lime light. Put them in the center of the stage. Make character for your home town, and when anybody comes with an idle tale tell them to "forget it," and mind their own business.

Wonder if the Christian Scientist can say without a smile. "There i
