IT'S THE LITTLE FISH THAT BITE.

How provoking it is when we go out for a good mess of trout in the Spring to have those pesky little minnows grab the whole blooming angle worm and run. That's what happened to the News the other day. We baited the hook for a fair sized trout, and a wee little minnow took the bait all to himself; hogged it down and ran. Well it was good bait anyway, and we hope it did little fishy good. "It is the truth which hurts." "If the coat fits, put it on and wear it."

HOW ABOUT IT?

"What is your center of thought. Tell me that and I will tell you what sort of a person you are." Such were the words heard on the street the other day, and they awakened a string of thoughts that came trooping like the "jugglers" in the moving picture show. If self is your centre you are in a very bad way indeed. Get out of it. Live for somebody else as well as yourself. It will help the other fellow, too. When you hear a man talking about 'My home,' 'my family,' 'what I do,' to the exclusion of all else. Set him down and do it quickly, too. He has a narrow vision. He's cramped. He is like an old gentleman, the writer knew in a country village, who went about bragging that the Sunday clothes he wore, was the same suit he bought 27 years before. What if? Didn't he have a right to wear the same suit of clothes for twenty or fifty years if he chose? Of course he did and he had a right to be buried in them if he wanted too. But how about the other fellow, the Tailor? where does he come in? That man did not know he got self centered. MONEY, was all he thought about. Now, with few friends, he wonders why folks have gone back on him. They haven't. They simply don't know him. He would never take time to let them get acquainted with him. He was too busy. You can't afford to be too busy to make friends. Money is all right for stormy days, but days are not all stormy. There are sunshiny ones, too, and then friends, fellows, like the kind you ought to be, make mighty good companions and do a heap more good than money. Make friends while you can. Don't be selfish. Treat the other fellow right and remember that you are the other fellow to him.

THIS IS NOT A STRIKE!

There has been introduced in the Legislature for the Supervisors of Broome County asking, or rather authorizing an increase in their salaries. One of the arguments used was that the supervisors of Broome County received less pay than any other county, except Allegany. So it seems from the face of it that "Old Allegany" is the lowest on the list and pays her supervisors the lowest for their services than any other like body in the State. Or to put it simply, Supervisor labor is cheap. But don't carry for a moment any idea that it is a CHEAP Board. No Sir. We would prefer to think that the spirit of public service and sacrifice, is higher here than in any other part of the State. Somebody might say, "Well, it's a good place to get into the game." A stepping stone to higher things. Someone else might say, "Well don't you know the itching for higher things, or rather public preferment is worth something. Of course, of course. But seriously and very seriously, the men on the Boards of Supervisors have been men of great worth, and their serving for little pay is a recommendation of their worth. They ought to have more and never should it be allowed that "Old Allegany" pays her public servants less than any other people. Somebody start the ball rolling. Let the Supervisors, in these times of high living have salaries commensurate with their worth.

Phillips Suggested.

In view of Governor Hughes' unexpected decision to retire from office at the end of his present term and his emphatic declaration that there are no circumstances under which he would renounce the friends of non-remuneration, the friends of non-remuneration, the friends of non-remuneration, are urging the consideration of his name for the republican nomination. He is already assured the solid energetic support of his home county and in him the whole of Western New York will be able to unite upon a candidate whose clean, honest record of ten years legislative experience shows him to have been upon the side of the people's best interests on every measure that has arisen in the last decade. The fact that he has been a leader in opposition to that impractical fraud of direct primaries advocated by the Hinman-Green Bill, has demonstrated his strength and courage of his convictions. He believes in primary reform but has found himself in good company with the Presidents of leading Universities and prominent men in states which have been disappointed in their trials of the direct primary schemes, in opposition to the Hinman-Green bill. Otherwise than in the direct primary matter, Mr. Phillips has been a consistent supporter of the Hughes policies.

He would make a popular candidate, being a man of the people, who from a poor boy has risen by his own efforts to a high position in the profession of the law, and his long experience in the Assembly and tested integrity urge his name upon the Republican party as a most available candidate.—Belmont Dispatch.

ARMY LIFE

office, and whenever he draws any articles of the uniform they are charged against his allowance. If he is economical and takes good care of his uniforms, there should be several dollars to his credit when discharged. On his following enlistment one-half or even better should be saved.

Opportunities

In the army many opportunities are offered for advancement. One who has the ability and wishes to, can work his way from a private to a general, but of a commissioned officer he must remain in the service until sixty-three years of age before while a non-commissioned officer or private can retire as young as thirty-five if he has sufficient foreign service to his credit, each year so spent counting him two off on the thirty required for retirement. Thus a soldier entering the service at eighteen and remaining in the Philippines for fifteen years would retire at thirty-three. The majority are satisfied to obtain the position of a non-commissioned officer but even then he must understand his business and be familiar with his duties in order to hold this job. For example I will mention a few of the many requirements of a first Sergeant. First: of all he must be a good drill instructor of every drill pertaining to the branch of service that he is in and able to handle all kinds of mer and different situations both in garrison and in field. He must be a clerk, bookkeeper and typewriter; competent to make a military map; also have a fair knowledge of engineering and signalling and be an expert in administering first aid. Other grades of non-commissioned officers are assigned certain duties according to their rank.

In the articles written I have but briefly touched upon a soldier's life as it is in the United States. In the Philippines we have some 15,000 troops at all times; Alaska, 2,000 and the Hawaiian Islands are also garrisoned by a few hundred. All of these places come under the head of foreign service, and of course army life is vastly different there, especially in the Philippines, where the soldier learns what real hardships are. But I shall not discuss foreign service in this article. Perhaps at some future time I will endeavor to write a few reminiscences of my service in the Tropics.
