The official count of South Dakota shows that woman suffrage carried all but five counties; that 47.6 per cent. of the total vote was cast for suffrage.

"The city pays its educators less than a janitor, less than a peanut stand tender, less than a varnish spreader, less than a sewer digger, less than a washwoman, less than a cornhusker, less than a horse," even so does a survey of the conditions among women teachers of Detroit visualize for the reader what it means to be on the salary list of a government in which one has no voice.

Schoolboys going about quoting their mothers' opinions on candidates: men staying home to talk politics with their women folk; women in rural districts registering and voting about like men, until a moral issue pops up and then they pop to the polls in greater numbers than men; women as a class refusing to vote at all unless the issue is so clear that they can understand it; these and many more things are cited by Mary Roberte Coolidge Ph. D. in an article in the Alumnus Quarterly of Wellesley College on the results of woman suffrage in California.

In Steuben County the suffrage canvassers have a homemade answer to people who say that women do not want to vote. For they can pull out of their pockets a copy of the election returns and point to the heading which tells that over 3,000 voters in Steuben either did not know enough or care enough to vote for any candidates save the President of the United States. And the suffragists claim that these 3,000 delinquent men citizens should at least make way for 3,000 women who are enough interested in state and county matters, not to throw away their vote.

It is more than whispered in a Chicago paper that the Republican managers of Montana would not have mourned if Jeanette Rankin had been defeated; that, in fact, the state campaign was so mapped out that her oratory would reach as few voters as possible, and only her threat to make for herself an independent route won for her the chance to speak to big audiences from the Republican platform. So difficult is it for the professional politician to make himself like the idea of the woman voter and the woman office holder.

In 1836 a young and beautiful Polish woman, Ernestine Rose, circulated a petition in Albany for a law to let married women control their property. She got five signers.

So it is clear that it is not because women are now asking for the vote that they meet opposition. It is because they are asking for anything that they haven't got.

Bath's board of trade realized from its fair the sum of $1,600 which will be applied to the fund for the construction of a new silk mill building. At a special election Geneva voted, 450 to 142, to appropriate $20,000 for an additional unit for the slow sand filter at the city's pumping station. Sixty-five milk producers in the vicinity of Avon have formed a branch of the Dairymen's league, with James W. Anderson as president.

The official canvass of the New York vote in the recent election showed that Mr. Hughes received the greatest number of votes of any Republican nominee.

LONGFELLOW'S INSPIRATION.

New England Came to Write His Most Famous Works.

When Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was appointed professor of modern languages and literature at Harvard University in 1835 he took up his residence in the old Vassal mansion, once the most pretentious home in Cambridge. It was there that Washington made his headquarters when he took charge of the colonial army in July, 1775, and under the elms which shaded the first president and General Lafayette met and conferred.

It was in this home, according to no less an authority than Hezekiah Butterworth, the historian, of Boston, that many of Longfellow's most famous poems were written. The original of "The Clock on the Stairs" claimed the hours as the poet worked. A summer morning was the inspiration of "The Psalm of Life" in 1838, when Longfellow still was a young man. He placed it in his diary and for many years would not consent to its publication, but when he finally did it quickly "flew over the world," to quote Butterworth. A few lines of the poem in Japanese characters on a Japanese fan once were found by a friend traveling in the orient, who sent the fan to Longfellow as evidence of the wide audience which "The Psalm of Life" enjoyed.

In 1839 a storm of unusual violence swept the New England coast, and that night Longfellow could not sleep. He got up and wrote "The Wreck of the Hesperus," finishing the verses as the clock on the stairs struck 3.

"The Hanging of the Crane" was suggested when Longfellow went to call on a bride and bridegroom. He found them seated at a little tea-table in front of the hearth. The young husband also was a poet, and Longfellow advised him to write a romance on the Acadian custom of hanging the crane. Ten years later they met again, and, finding that his suggestion had not impressed the other, Longfellow wrote "The Hanging of the Crane" himself.

Hawthorne told Longfellow the story of Evangeline, adding that he had been urged to write a romance based on it, but thought it better suited for verses. The story of Hiawatha, related to Schoolcraft by Abraham Le Fort, an Onondaga chieftain, furnished the poet with the outline of his embellished verse. The "Tales of a Wayside Inn" were suggested by an old colonial hosteller at Sudbury, Mass., which still is in existence.—Kansas City Times.

CITATION FOR PROBATE OF WILL

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

By the Grace of God Free and Independent.

To Bridget Dougherty (Anderson, N. Y.), Michael Dougherty, Patrick Dougherty, Daniel Dougherty, Peter Dougherty (Shamrock, Okla.), Anna Curran, Bridget Langhney, Catherine Dougherty (Lima, O.), Anna Dougherty Weger, Edward D. Dougherty, P. John Dougherty, Leo F. Dougherty, Dennis J. Dougherty, Agnes Dougherty, Bridget Dougherty (Sugar Notch, Pa.), Martin Dougherty, Peter Dougherty (Sugar Notch, Pa.), Mary Dougherty, Catherine Dougherty, (Sugar Notch, Pa.)

WHEREAS Michael Dougherty, who resides at Andover, N. Y., has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of our County of Allegany, to have a certain instrument in writing, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last Will and Testament of JAMES F. DOUGHERTY, who was at the time of his death a resident of Andover, N. Y., Deceased.

THEREFORE, you and each of you are cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of our County of Allegany, at the Surrogate's Office in the Village of Belmont, N. Y., on the 19th day of January, 1917, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the said Will and Testament should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

IN TESTIMONY WHERE-

OF, we have caused the Seal of the Surrogate's Court of the said County of Allegany to be hereunto affixed.

Sign Boards on the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams.

By a law evident in every quarter of the world, like socks like; and relation depends upon affinity. From sand-note up to deity this law governs.

In the social body this tendency has been the causation of groups drawn together by similarity of nature and purpose.

Among the ancient civilizations we find clearly developed certain brotherhoods. For example, the ancient Egyptian priest-cult developed a fine moral code which were by Moses, who according to legend was an initiate, incorporated their moral conclusions into the Jewish code.

It might be interesting to consider what human history would be if Moses had stayed among the Egyptians instead of colonizing a company of slaves in this traditional heritage.

It is very certain that the history of Moses would be different. He would not have reached that spiritual eminence on which, in a marvelous figure, the shadow of the shining of deity flamed his face.

But the same is possible to any pure heart; for they shall see God.

Jesus did not invent the brotherhood idea. He only made it universal in scope by grounding it upon eternal ideas of relation. Friendship is your great affinity-makar. His eminence among men is not established by the miraculous which clusters about him. Then thousand more angels might have hovered over his birth-place, he might have done greater works than those ascribed to him—and been forgotten. Immortality inheres in life and not in magic. His life is his credential. As in a mirror we see all that a human being could reflect of God: in him we see the true man and woman. It is his life that is the light of men.

Plato made friendship the measure of a man's social standing. Jesus made friendship the evidence of eternal life.

The sure road to immortality is by this trail. Behold how the friends and lovers of the ages have come down upon the rivers of memory.

When we mention David, we think of Jonathan. They achieved a friendship of such quality that the enthusiastic narrator likens it to woman's love. That is it transcends all measures.

My friends, it is the deathless quality of woman's love that is the lifting power of the human race, for her's is a godlike affection woven of compassion unspeakable, of hope unextinguishable, of faith unfailing.

When it was forbidden any Greek to give the remains of Phocian burial; it was his wife who buried his ashes under her hearthstone. How trifling death to her who had twisted her heart into the life of her husband.

Woman's love is her supreme spiritual expression. It is her being. She needs no other distinguishing quality. She becomes an unclassifiable creature, love gone, a caricature.

Man is the warrior, explorer, sage, worker, reeding always a defining word. Woman is such by the supremacy of her affection. It is this which keeps the race forever climbing. As Goethe says in Faust, "the ever-womanly leadeth us ever to the mountains."

The standing of the community is the attitude of its women:

What has given Socrates and his group of friends so great abiding on human streets? They were questers of truth and out of their love-tossed hearts God has seeded the ages. But Socrates was spiritually illuminated by Distina, the woman who taught Socrates the secret of the universe.

Name a contemporary of Dante. It is not easy to do. What has given him his memorable standing? The glorification of a deathless friendship. Out of his inferno of suffering Beatrice lifted him and it seemed, he says, that when she looked upon him from paradise a new day dawned on day.

The 11 men who gathered around Jesus did so because He was very lovable. His tremendous humanity appealed. And their historical vitality came through their friendship's enthusiasm.

They did not set out to build a religion, never dreamed of it. What impelled them out on the highways was their passion to tell of Jesus. The telling was the evangelism that quickened human hearts. It was a very simple story—at the first—and wonderfully appealing. God was a father, men were brothers. Jesus was the light home; just that. His life was the light of men.

Shakespeare tells how lovers change eyes. That is the infallible sign. Dr. Joseph Cook makes the Christian one who has changed eyes with God. Whereupon we see in the folks about us immortal souls. That means fellowship, friendship and sharing-kindness raised to a fine art. For we do not hurt immortal souls deliberately.

After every other means of winning people to God fails try friendship. He has glorified it by sending Jesus to show His great love and giving Him this word whosoever will let Him come.

Friendship triumphs because it must need to close. A shrill human heart, possessing a kingdom in the brain, beats its way into other hearts.

Love never faileth.

Ed. Swain, Maple St., Andover, says: "I think hard work is what weakens my kidneys and brings on attacks of kidney complaint. When I stoop over to put on my shoes, a sharp pain catches me in the small of my back and I can hardly rise up. WITNESS, HON. ELBA REYNOLDS, Surrogate

(L. S.) of said County, at Belmont, N. Y., this 15th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixteen (1916).

LEON A. ACKERMAN, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

NOTE—This citation is served to give you Legal Notice of the Proceeding; but you are not obliged to appear unless you desire to do so.

Letter from Dr. Pierce.
Dear Reader—I am sorry to say that we are both with kidney trouble. People take you give you medicine, but it does not help. I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicine for past twenty-five years with good results. I suffered with kidney trouble for some years. I recently heard of the discovery of Doctor Pierce's remedy, namely, "Anuric." Kidney trouble is a disease that seems to affect all. I am completely cured of my trouble. I recommend heartily all sufferers to Dr. Pierce, for what he has done for me cannot be estimated too highly. A doctor pronounced me a very preserved woman for my age, all due, I believe, to Dr. Pierce's medical aid.

Yours very truly,

Mrs. MELINDA MILLER.

NOTE: You all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his wonderful medicine. Well, this preparation is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physiologist and specialist Dr. Pierce's Favorite Medical Institute of New York, for kidney complaints of all kinds arising from diseases of the kidneys, such as, backache, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public but by the prescription of many patients. Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it in the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers, at 10 cents for large trial packages and free book.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There is no better imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and to all sufferers.

STOP THAT COUGH

Mark Twain
A Real American
Mark Twain was a steamboat pilot. He was a seafarer for gold in the far west. He was a printer. He worked bitterly hard. All this without a glimpse of the great destiny that lay before him. Then, with the opening of the great wide west, Mark Twain's genius bloomed. He had found his great place. His fame spread through the nation. It flew to the ends of the earth, till his work was translated into strange tongues. From then on, the path of fame lay straight to the high places.

The world has asked is there an American literature? Mark Twain is the answer. It is the heart, the spirit of America. From his poor and struggling boyhood to glorious, splendid old age, he remained simple, as democratic as the plowmen of our forefathers.

The Price Goes Up

25 VOLUMES

Before the war we had a complete set of Mark Twain's books at reduced price. The last of the edition is in sight. The price has gone up. These are more Mark Twain in the price.
