110 YEARS AGO TO DAY

ROBERT E. LEE WAS BORN

This beloved Southern leader was one of the most capable generals the exigencies of warfare ever produced. Altho the leader in a lost cause his integrity, bravery and capability rank with those of any Union general. Our country is now independent, our people nationally free, but are the majority of you free financially?

Think this over; if it strikes home come into this bank and open an account; most successful men started with a small bank account.

Shaner, is hovering between life and death at the Olean Hospital today. He was struck by an Erie train and thrown down an embankment while walking the track. He dragged himself to Buffalo Street where his calls for help were heard by Dr. Cassar Smith, who happened along in his auto. He took him to the hospital where the amputation of the leg was completed. Shaner is a dairyman and oil producer.

Dinner favors of $100 bills were distributed at a banquet in Binghamton, given by George F. Johnson to thirty foremen in the Endicott-Johnson factories. Under each plate was found a crisp new $100 bill. The color scheme of the banquet was green and white to match the favors.

Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, chairman of the legislative investigating committee that turned the public service commission upside down and raked over all manner of delicate issues recently, has had enough of the probing business. He announced that he had quit.

MRS. WM. TUCKER

Mrs. Wm. Tucker died at her home in Elm Valley, Jan. 10th, at 7:40 P. M., of Bright's disease, after a short illness of one week.

Mrs. Tucker united with the Presbyterian Church of Friendship, when 16 years of age, and remained a faithful member of that church up to the time of her departure. Mrs. Tucker was a kind, considerate mother, and leaves to mourn her loss five children and many neighbors and friends who will bear testimony to her kind and loving disposition.

DUSTIN FARNUM

In "David Garrick," Auditorium, Saturday Evening

David Garrick's greatest ambition is to uplift the stage. All of his wonderful talents are directed toward that end. He becomes the idol of many, but advances, particularly from women, arouse no interest in him, until one night while playing "Romeo" he sees her in a box.

Simon Ingot, a wealthy London tradesman, visits Garrick and tells him that his daughter has fallen in love with him. He offers Garrick a big sum to leave England, thus giving Square Chivy, a favored suitor, a clear field. Garrick refuses, but consents to cure the girl of her infatuation for him.

He attends a dinner at Ingot's home, and meets the daughter—the girl of his dreams. Stung to misery by his promise to Ingot, Garrick carried out his plan. Chivy becomes aware of Garrick's secret affection for Ingot's daughter, Ada, and informs her. The evolution of the story from this point holds one breathless with interest in its masterly combination of humor, pathos, tenderness, and passion. And finally happiness builds to a delightful ending.

The character of David Garrick is portrayed by Dustin Farnum, who has infused into it a wonderful amount of heart interest and sympathy. The cast gives him excellent support making up a wonderfully successful story. —Advertisement.
