The country is practically at war with Germany. Especially is it true that Germany engaged in making war upon us. She has sunk our ships, murdered our citizens, men, women and children. She has sent defenceless women and children adrift on the icy seas, in the night time, in small boats, half clad, to their death from suffering and exposure, and when the sufferings were so horrible that they produced death in a few hours.

She has invaded our country by her secret spies and blown up our factories, destroying our property and killing our citizens. She has destroyed our commerce. She has, while professing friendship, intrigued to induce other nations with whom we were at peace, to make war against us, and has shown herself to be an enemy of the most malignant type.

Treason to this country is defined as giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, and with the above facts showing Germany to be our enemy, actually at war, on her part, upon us, how much less than treason is the action of some self-styled pacifists in the Senate? Their acts in obstructing our President in his duty, and preventing our government from exercising the first law of nature in protecting ourselves. Their act will be hailed by Emperor William Turpetz and the military cabal of Germany and every torpdeo boat captain with delight. They will herald their acts as the failure of the representatives of the people to indorse the President. They will not inform their people that it was the obstruction that one man could make to defeat the will of all the other members combined. They cry peace, but as Patrick Henry said "There is no peace." The chains they have forged for us are already clanking. It seems hardly possible that men, citizens, who have been elevated to the highest lagislative body on earth could be induced to join hands with the enemies of our country, enemies that are now engaged in acts of war in our country.

Sign Boards on the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams

THE WAYFARER TALE

I'm telling you, mates, that was a wonderful Man they sent down the long, gray road.
And no one knows what it was all about.
A lot of folks are telling how good He was; his enemies say that He was too friendly with people down-and-out.
That's so; He was friendly to me. I met Him first near the Desert Road. He looked played-out, but His eyes were clear as dawn.
I have looked on many faces in my wanderings, but I had never seen before a face that had no shadows on.
I had stopped to chat a bit and get acquainted, my way, you know, for I thought He was just a new man to the road.
Soon saw I 'd made a mistake.
'Spite of shabby clothes I knew He was a gentleman.
Something in His eyes that glowed.
And warmed me, made me free to offer Him the bread and meat I had begged. I wish it had been better, but 'twas all I had.
I can't explain, but I found myself wishing I was good enough to offer to go away with Him and be His comrade He wasn't a weakling; seemed like a man on fire, of fire never kindled on earth. He was a man, only—just different-made.
He seemed a man of open fields, loved flowers, kept watching the clouds in the sky . . . . a strange sort of carpenter.
That was His trade.
We talked a long time, and then He said 'Friend, I must be on my business,' and mates, I wish you had seen the light leap to His face!
It went through me like the trumpet's rallying stir when soldiers charge; and that Desert Road seemed fair a holy place.
And so if He'd seen a vision He spoke of kings and kingdoms, prayed for common folk and children, for the sick and old.
And then He talked of shepherds seeking on the mountains for the sheep lost in the dark, and of the long road to the fold.
He opened heaven's highways and I saw the prophets and the captains on the hills, I heard the horsemen leap.
And I clear forgot in my dreams, that He and I were wanderers upon the earth—and with never a place to sleep.

He asked me to come, and if I had been half the man He's made me since, remembering Him, I 'd have followed — a space behind.
I wasn 't fit, I thought, but now I see He wanted me. I think they that sent Him 'out' did so because He was not—their kind.

• • •

I heard the mob a-shouting. You know the nasty sound when human wolves run wild, and I hurried to see what made the stir.
And there, with His brow thorn-crowned and bent beneath His load, staggered the 'Kingdom-man,' the carpenter.
And that was the end of His trail. I met Him first and last on a desert-road. And first and last His eyes gleamed morning sun.
I had always felt He would find hard times at the hands of men and drink hate's bitter cups ere His road had fair begun.
Mates, I 'm rough, but I did a man's deed that day. I leaped through that mad, blood-frenzied mob — and offered to ease Him a bit.
'I must bear my load,' He said;
'this is the day of my throne-ing. His Kingdom is coming . . . . this road is the way to it.'
'My lifting-up pays toll for all at the kingdom's gate.' Talking of kingdoms, He came, talking of kingdoms He went.
Oh my carpenter spoke true. He has lifted me up to the stars.
I'm my own man and His where'er my soul should tent.
And watch, I will come again' were the last words I heard as they dragged me away, and scourged Him on. And soon or late On some open road, as I watch and wait, my Carpenter-Friend will come. And together we 'll enter the King-don's Gate.

Getting into the habit of reading ads, and of making purchases in the light of such reading on the information and on the impression so gained—is hard for some folks. But getting "out" of such a habit, once formed, would be unthinkable to them.

Ad answerers become judges of values—so that a store which expects to interest and attract them has to offer real inducements.
