DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE DISLIKE WICKS

aim It Would Badly Dairymen. They Con Purchase Feed, Fertilizer Market Products Colle

The directors of the Dairy League, at a meeting held on March 7th, 1917, discussed the Wicks bill, which is now in the New York State Legislature, and listened to a report of the committee appointed to investigate this bill. The directors voted unanimously to accept the report and to draw attention to every member of the league from the report of the committee and opinions submitted by her prominent attorneys. The directors of the Dairy League could not exist if the bill become a law in its present form.

The conclusions and recommendations as embodied in the Attorney J. D. Miller, of the legislation committee follows:

Conclusions

First. Such act will at the league give notice of the admission of all board members at such meetings and at the commission may be taken part in the discussion of such matters as to procedure. Such requirements of the league will prevent this board from holding executive sessions with directors present.

Second. By the provisions of the Act, all contracts made by the league for the sale of milk will be invalid, unless approved by the commission. Such a provision has, therefore, a veto power over the exercise of which the price of milk by the league will be approved by the commission. Third. Because of such provisions vested in the commission the price of milk will be determined by the appointment of the league will have no voice.

Fourth. Such Act as a result of more than one for state in state supervision; but providing for state control of its terms, the control of the league will largely be taken over by the members and directors of the league in such commission.

Fourth. Such Act as a result of more than one for state in state supervision; but providing for state control of its terms, the control of the league will largely be taken over by the members and directors of the league in such commission.
