By Joseph S. Williams

I wonder who 'such a man' was. It was he to whom Jesus said word that he was needing a house and materials for His last supper (as it transpired) on earth.

I should like to think it was some one of the many to whom Jesus had shown some kindness, some father, perhaps, whose little child was playing in the sunlight by the Master's healing. Surely 'Such a Man' had over the object of Jesus' kindness.

The history of Jesus is romantic because of the quality of His contact with folks. He is the only one who never left a wound on a scalded heart or distressed spirit or put burdens on any poor shoulders—but always (and this validates his Sonship to God) He left a Trail of light and flowers springing up in gardens of hearts. And never a home did He leave without giving the Man and Woman, the key of the kingdom of joy.

We have kept fragrant the memory of Philip and Andrew by naming them into brotherhoods for bringing other men to see Jesus. Peter has achieved supremacy by being set forth on the rock-fast type of men of whom Jesus is building God's Kingdom. When we mention Paul it is with a swift vision of a soldier under fire but obedient to his trust. John sets the music of love sounding. And when we think of 'such a man' it is to glorify our poor selves who can do little more than help Jesus in His need of a house of life—or a house of home—or a house of worship, in which to meet His friends.

It is not possible for every one to gain a preeminence by conspicuous deed, but we may gain supremacy by humble service. 'He that would be first among you, let him be the servant of all.' And we can be that 'such a man.'

God dared not make Me leader of the multitudes. But I stood beside the road And cried, "Good journey Brothers!" As they passed. His goals of fire Did not rest on my lips. But I lifted my song From my humble garden spot. And said, "Face Forward Brothers!" As they passed.

BREAK YOUR MATCH IN TWO

A Suggestion That Became a Rule in Forest Fire Prevention

One day late in June a man in a room on the seventh floor of an old fashioned brick building in Washington, holding a sheaf of telegrams in his left hand, busy with his right taking red-headed pins out of his mouth and sticking them into little irregular blocks of green ink scattered over a large white wall map of the United States.

"The big problem," he said, taking a fresh pin out of his mouth and turning sideways to his assistant, "is to get at the fellow who knows what conservation is but forgets to apply it when he lights up a cigar in the woods."

The assistant sat at a flat-topped oak desk in the middle of the room, struggling through a mass of reports from field men in the endeavor to find suggestions for a set of fire prevention "rules."

"Well, what do you think of this?" he said, holding up a report from the Pacific Northwest. "Break your match in two before you throw it away."

The other man stuck the last red pin into the map, reached for his pipe and lighted it.

"Let's see," he said. He snapped the burning match in his fingers. As the pieces dropped to the floor he uttered a sharp exclamation and tenderly licked the index finger of his left hand.

The assistant laughed. "That's the idea!" he said. "You've got to blow it out before you break it or get burned."—Ex.

DRY MEASURES

INACCURATE

The use of dry measures is subject to many errors due to variation in weight of commodities, diameter of the measure and different methods of filling. An example of this was the "bottomless" measure which went out of use some time ago. The bottomless peck measure would contain about twelve pounds of potatoes, which was three pounds short weight, and the trouble was not that it had no bottom, but that the top was of such small diameter that it could not be heaped.

Dry measures are only legal when so filled that the weight required by law is delivered, and the user is responsible for the weight. As far as possible all commodities should be bought and sold by weight.

The weight that shall constitute a bushel has been fixed by law in New York State for twenty-nine commodities. These weights and the weights of the half-bushel, peck, half-peck, quarter-peck and quart have been arranged in a convenient reference table on a card seven by nine inches and will be distributed to the stores of this county.

Any person desiring one of these cards can obtain it from the Department of Weights and Measures, Wallsville, N. Y.

SUFFRAGE LEADER WRITES OPEN LETTER TO SENATOR BROWN

Taking Senator Elton R. Brown to task for his opposition to woman suffrage, Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, in an open letter to the senate leader, says:

"Dear Sir—Although your party endorsed the principle of woman suffrage at its national convention and recommended the submission of woman suffrage to the voters of New York state at the next election in November, at its state convention, and although you yourself voted in favor of this resubmission amendment, nevertheless, in your speech to the senate on Monday, March 12, you say:

"I am opposed to woman suffrage because it conflicts with my ideal of manhood and womanhood. The present European conflict illustrates my point. Who fights the men of France or the women of France? Who for Belgium? themselves nor the state."

The issue is clear. You publicly declare in the halls of legislation at Albany that "women can neither defend themselves nor the state." Can it be that you are ignorant of what is going on today in Europe?

In reply permit me to call your attention to a different point of view than yours held by two of the leading statesmen of the British government. On March 28 the British government was squarely committed to woman suffrage.

Mr. Lloyd George said: "When after the war the nation comes to re-examine the whole industrial fabric to give women no justice therein would be an outrage; it would be inequitable, unjust and ungrateful."

In the house of commons Mr. Asquith said: "My opposition to woman suffrage was based solely on considerations of public expediency. The women have now worked out their own salvation. The war could not be carried on without them."

"The situation here will be no different. Your party has said that women should have the right to vote. The experience of England has proved it. On what grounds do you still believe that they should be denied that right?" (Signed)

VIRA NORMAN WHITEHOUSE. (Mrs. Norman DeR. Whitehouse), Chairman.
