Sign Boards on the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams

The General Assembly at Dallas showed its progressive spirit by two pieces of fine legislatiop.

First, the giving of full liberty to our theological professers. Efforts have been made by self-termed defenders of the faith to put a clamp upon free thought in our seminary chairs. This antiquated 16th century retrogressiveness received a decided setback by assembly giving full freedom to progressive thought. Religion is the one vitality that may not be fixed. It grows with God's revelation of His Truth as men's minds and hearts expand and become capable of understanding His mind. Heresy-hunters are amusing to a progressive church like ours. The advances of every line of human thought have been made by heresies. If it were not for heresy (so-called) we would still be in the fogs and sloughs of the remote past. Our church says to its men, "go forward; be not afraid." Our quest is Truth! The truth shall make for freedom

Second, the Social Service Commission ratifies all those men in the pulpit who have seen Jesus' vision of the world made fit for human living. The Social Service Commission gives now authority for the kingdom of heaven emphasis which heretofore has been looked upon by some as apart from the Christian program.

The assembly certified the thought of the social service program by giving every encouragement to take the Christian's conception of life into actual operation. The church not only saves souls but preserves lives and makes conditions fit for human growth and conducive to human joy. This is a great step in advance.

The minister who now refuses to emphasize the kingdom of heaven upon earth thru social development is still a victim of the one-sided gospel of the past. They who affirm the business of religion to build up this life and to minister to every man are in the fellowship of the Christ whos death on the cross was social service raised to the highest power.

I want many to read J. E. McAfee's wonderful speech. He was setting forth a home mission program before assembly. The following is a part of a most inspiring address.

"The supreme obligation of the moment is that we dedicate ourselves to the new human brotherhood forming upon the earth," he said. "The Nation has entered the war—nay, we have joined the revolution. Begun as a neighborhood quarrel among states, a continental war has become a world-wide social reconstruction. No nation lies beyond its mighty sweep. This Nation is plainly in its path.

"At war, this Nation not less, but more than ever, holds for the universal human commonwealth It will not, it can not violate the common human brotherhood by petty spites and ignoble hate thrn cannon roar and blood flow and stricken brothers reel and groan and fall. God keep us pure in heart."

Predicts New Era

The coming of a new era for the United States as well as all the world was heralded by Dr. McAfee.

"God make us stout of heart to sacrifice the sordid old and exult to see it go," he said. "Europe has departed or is speeding down the ways. The Russia of 500 years is no more. The Germany of yesterday can never be again—thank God (Applause.) The careless, volatile, garish France men knew a while ago they will never know henceforth. A Britain bloated with conquest, luxurious and class-ridden at home, temporizing and supercilious abroad, is blotted from the new world. The triumph of British arms will but make that the more certain. And the America of yesterday—puffed up, soddenly self-satisfied, each cittizen striving his selfish part, sweating out pelf for a day of industrial wrath, blind to goals, feverishly hastening on but unknowing and little caring whither—does any believe, is any so sordid as to hope, that the America of yesterday will live on tomorrow!"

"Commercial, overreaching precipitated this world conflict. Greedy empires make war inevitable. Paganism in practice can only cultivate the pagan harvest of blood and hate. A religious formalism which can find itself at home in such a world must go down in its wreck. It is the accomplice in the crime when it invites men sodden in these ignoble purposes to the worship of a Holy God, when it must ring the changes upon formulae of yesterday to cover a craven silence about social abortions and economic injustice and industrial iniquity of to-day.

"All for Common Good"

"I plead for a home mission policy which will forever set our great church right at this point, for the announcement made unequivacal by deeds as well as words that we mean always and everywhere to practice the grace of brotherhood; that we are not jealous for a sect, but are ready to give our utmost all for the common good.

"The fire must consume our provincial bombast and racial pride. There lies Mexico. She is our neighbor. She is our enemy in all but the form. Weakness stops her from avenging what she esteems the insults and ravaging of the past. Her new Constitution is framed to resist interference she has resented in the past, and only grudgingly admits even our missionary propaganda. Our Christian system finds here its severest test. Our closest neighbors are those best qualified to appraise the gospel we offer to the world. Though now restrained from the free access we formerly accepted so falteringly in the missionary enterprise, this we can now do. We can line this southern border with a continuous chain of Christian normal and industrial schools, with well-ordered church centers and with every wholesome community equipment for the million and a quarter Mexicans now residing on this side of the line. Through these and the civilization they will speedily produce, we can invite the rising generation in Mexico to share with us the practical Christian culture and enduring ideals such a program will embody.

"Our policy of aloofness and racial prudery breaks down all along the line. Elsewhere men of varying races are held apart by official barriers. Here we may know men of all races and climes humanly, brotherly. They diig the ditches in our streets, their children share the benches with ours in the schools, with them we transact our daily business, they mingle their blood with ours in the closest bonds of wedlock and in the last measure of devotion to common ideals of statehood. Here and there we still indulge the follies of race pride. A belated anglo-saxon still conceivies this land to be his. The dwindling set whose forebears chanced to alight upon this or that territory plumes itself upon its decaying aristocracy. But these grow feebler and their pretensions comic in their decay. Saxon, Slav and Gaul; Teuton, Roman-and Briton; Greek Frank and Czech; Magyar, Dane and Swiss; Spanish, Pole and Norse; even Turk, Malay and Mongol own this land as theirs and match a natal right with the loyal discharge of patriotic duty.
