Our National Capital

Events of Interest from the Seat of Government by the News Special Correspondent, J. E. Jones

WELCOME TO OUR CITY

Washington, D. C., January 19.—At the time of the Civil war the volunteers came so fast that someone got up a song to the effect that "We are coming, Father Abraham, 3000,000 strong," or something to that effect. But 300,000 is a piker's count for 1918; and there are many people in different parts of the country willing to come to Washington, and help swell the public pay roll. Every few minutes the size of the force appears to increase; and there is a reminder of Auld Lang Syne in the whole affair, since old acquaintances are forgotten it is apt to be very embarrassing, as they are showing up in proud numbers, and naturally seek out old acquaintances and friends. Just how many new clerks there are no one seems to know, but they run into the tens of thousands—and there are more on the way. It takes a big crew to look after an armed force of close to a million and a half of men. Besides that, the industrial situation has gone topsy-turvy, and all these things have to be figured out, and written about. Our peaceful village has passed, and the proud Capital that had long been the "parlor of the Nation" is getting to be as black and sooty as other places. The city has become a sort of stenographers' paradise; and it is a poor community that has not an eligible for a job at Washington. Washington has the welcome on the door mat, and for about twice the normal price the newcomer can get a dirty room in a boarding house with the motto on the wall that "Tuesdays are Meatless, and Wednesdays are Wheatless," and nearly every day is likely to be Heatless.

Running the Railroads

Everyone appears to feel a good deal of satisfaction in the attempt being made to run the railroads as a signal unit. For a quarter of a century the railroad question has been before the American people; and in the end every state got to regulating in its own way. Of course it did not matter that the states were very contradictory, and what was considered good in one state was bad in another, and vice versa. In the railroading process the old-time autocrats were thrown into the discard, and a progressive lot of men came to the front. They had live suggestions to make to the Government; and were in a fair way to get them worked along lines that would have been a good thing for everybody. But the war changed everything, and the railroads were unable to carry on the transportation of the country. So it happened, almost over night, that Mr. McAdoo was called upon to "manage the railroads." People "do say" that if he gets away with it he will be President—and if he does not succeed that he will "be forgot." McAdoo is unfortunate in that he has gotten the reputation of being a sort of wizard, and all such people eventually prove by their failures that they are human. Of course Mr. McAdoo does not expect to fail in the present instance, and if the good-will of the public counts for aught, he will make a big success. After all, he has only the advantage of "making one railroad help out the others, and by combining facilities of all of them, direct shipments are made possible. In the eastern states passenger trains have been discontinued by the wholesale, and no one ventures to leave home unless it is actually necessary. That helps some, too.

Since railroad stocks have advanced on the stock exchanges it is reasonable to suppose that the railroads are not displeased with the present condition, particularly in view of the fact that it has relieved them of the difficulty of readjusting wages throughout the country at a time when there is not a very strong hope that their frequent pleas for increased rates would be approved. The main concern, so far as the railroads are involved, seems to hinge about the question as to whether they will ever get their properties back. The general belief is that they will not, and if Mr. McAdoo succeeds; and that they will have them restored to the original ownership in case the Government control does not work out in apple-pie order. Or in other words, if the railroads want their property back, they will not be able to get it; but if they do not want to take over the roads again they will likely have to. In either event, it's going to be a sour grapes for the railroads.

Billy Sunday in Washington

Billy Sunday, the great revivalist, is holding a series of meetings in Washington. He has an immense new building capable of seating 15,000 people, and it is filled every night. After one of the "evangelists," most extraordinary prayers, which by the way was applauded frequently, a local minister told Sunday that he had "given God more information on a greater number of topics than had perhaps ever been attempted before." Sunday made a great opening prayer at one of the sessions of the House after dining with Speaker Clark. Just how the meetings will appeal to the Capital is not very clear at this time; but it is certain that if Congress carries out all the suggestions that are made to it from the Sunday Tabernacle, that there will be a very long session. There is apparently no big problem with reference to which he hesitates to give advice.

A Lull in Woman's Suffrage

Woman's suffrage squeaked thru the House of Representatives by one vote; and if the President hadn't capitulated at the eleventh hour it wouldn't have gotten thru at all. The Republicans attempted to capture the credit for the championship of the measure in the House; and the President's position is constructed as a piece of counter-politics. By way of comment it might be inserted here that we still have politics in Washington, notwithstanding the opinions that prevail in some quarters. Now the matter is before the Senate, and what that body will do with the measure is very much a question. It is certain that the two-thirds vote necessary to submit the question to the states does not exist in the Senate. Therefore the actual conditions indicate that the suffragists will fail. But this viewpoint is not at all sure, since in other cases where the real sentiment was as pronounced as in this instance, the Senate has listened to the rambling voice of the people, and political expediency. The Senate even voted for direct elections of Senators, and that very much against its desire and judgment. So the august gentlemen may suddenly awake to a realization that "the time has come," as some of the Democratic statisticians have said, and jump for the band wagon. The clever women who have managed the suffrage campaigns in Washington have made it plain that they propose to go into the states and districts from which obstructionists come, and test conclusions with their opponents in the elections next year. And in the face of such threats it is no exaggeration to say that Presidents, Senators and all others in political offices equal the Senate will dispose of the matter some time this winter.

Food Question Box

These are some of the questions women are asking on food problems. They are answered by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University thru the Allegany County conservation agent. Address inquiries to the Food Question Box, this paper.

1. Why are we asked to do without pork?
 Pork, because it contains so much fat, is one of the most concentrated heat producing foods. The soldiers need it. The allies have had to slaughter their hogs in order to save the food they need for human consumption. They had decreased their hogs, by more than 32 million since the war. That is why pork must be sent abroad from this country.

2. Is there any real food value in the skins of potatoes?
 Most of the mineral salts contained in the potato are held in the cells which are next to the skin. If the potato is peeled and the skins discarded, much that is valuable is lost with the skins. It has been estimated that in paring a potato before cooking it, 20% of the food value is lost. If the skins are eaten they furnish roughage for regulating our bodies.

3. Can you tell me why cornmeal is still selling at 10 cents a pound and scarce at that?
 The congestion in the railroad traffic has made the shipping of the new corn crop impossible, so it has not yet reached the market.

4. What can a patriotic housewife use as wheat substitutes when rye flour and cornmeal can not be had at local stores?
 There is a good buckwheat crop in New York State. Buckwheat flour may be substituted for part of all of the wheat flour in recipes. Potatoes are also a good wheat saver. Mashed potatoes may replace flour in recipes and if more potatoes are eaten, less bread will be required by the body. An abundant use of oats, oatmeal, rolled oats, barley and rice will help reduce the wheat consumption.

Killed by Poisons

All scientists agree that poisons products in the blood are eliminated by the kidneys and liver. The kidneys act as a kind of filter for these products. When the kidneys are changed or degenerated, by disease or old age, then these poisons are retained in the body. If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals to flush the kidneys. Then procure at your nearest drug store Anuric, which Anuric drives the uric acid out. Scientific men have learned that in gout, also rheumatism, poisonous uric acid crystals are deposited in or about the joints, in the muscles, which inflammation is set up. If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a shot of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month. An-uric is many times more potent than lithia.
 You can obtain a trial package of Anuric for 10c by writing Dr. W. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in 5c packages.

SACKETT HARRIS, N. Y. — "For six months I had rheumatism in my knee and suffered from pain in back and kidney disease. I was treated by physicians but they did not help me but very little I read of Dr. Pierce's new discovery called Anuric, and procured a fifty cent package. After using three packages I was greatly improved and the continued use made me well. It was Anuric that gave me back my health." (Miss) TESSA SHORT, care Eveleigh House.
 CASTLE, N. Y. — "I procured a package of Anuric Tablets and have taken them. I can say that I have been wonderfully relieved of backache and the kidney trouble has almost entirely disappeared. I cheerfully recommend it."
 CHAS. O. LOCKE, Castle, N. Y.
