THE MAKING OF MAPLE SUGAR

Every Maple Sugar Producer

This Year That If You Buy the Matter How Much You Can Work It.

The Department of Forestry issued a circular urging all to increase the maple syrup production.

Issuing this circular, Forest Watch and Control officers, Sherman and Wiegman, emphasize the importance of making at home every possible pound of maple sugar this spring.

Because of the great shortage and best sugar the production of maple sugar this spring is of great importance to the State and to the world at large.

The bulletin, in order that sugar who has not tapped previous springs, but who has trees which should be tapped, may have some idea of how to work this publication has prepared. No claim is made for completeness.

Under war conditions, sugar producers from less than 500 buckets should not only pay for the sugar already equipped. They who have less than 500 buckets and are not equipped should plan for as cheap an amount as possible unless he looks into the future and sees he can develop some special market or increase his number of buckets. Every man who has a maple which can be tapped should produce all the sugar he can during the war, as a duty and to provide for home use. The operation of less than 500 buckets often pay, actually, because the farmer an opportunity of his own labor and that of his when there is no other gain.

The bulletin then gives a comprehensive summary of directions for maple sugar operation. It gives a list of manufacturers of maple sugar and estimates of present costs.

They may be obtained by Director H. E. Babcock, U. S. Department of Conservation, State Commission, Ithaca, N. Y., or the Food Commission of Albany, N. Y.
