THE SILVER STRIPES

When we've honored the heroes returning from France And we've mourned for the heroes who fell.

hen we've done all we can ber the home-coming man Who stood to the shot and the shell Let us all keep in mind those who lingered behind-

The thousands who waited to go-The brave an the true who did all they could do, * Yet have only the silver to show.

They went from their homes at the summons for men.

They drilled in the heat of the sup. They fell inot line with a pluck that was fine; Each cheerfully shouldered a gun;

They were ready to die for Old Glory on high They were eager to meet with the foe.

They were just like the rest of our bravest and best

Though they've only the silver to show.

Their bodies stayed here, but their spirits were there And the boys who looked ceath in the face.

For the cause, had no fear — for they knew waiting here There were many to fill upeach place. Oh, the ships came and went, till the battle was spent

And the tyrant went down with the blow! But he still might have reigned but for those who remained:

Though they only had silver to show.

So here's to the soldier who never saw France, And here's to the boys unafraid! Let us give them their due; they were glorious too,

And it isn't their fault that they stayed. They were eager to share in the sacrifice there; Let them share in the peac that we know. For we know they were brave, by the service they gave Though they ve only got sil ver to show.
