According to Best's Insurance Report, which is to the insurance business what Dunn and Bradstreet are to commercial business, all of the Stock Casuality companies writing Workmen's Compensation in the United States in the year 1918, collected $94,861,458 in premiums.

After setting up all reserves and paying the heavy commissions and overhead expense they made an underwriting profit of only $197,933.

From the same source, all of the Mutual companies writing compensation in the United States, collected $20,785,981, and after paying all expenses, and setting up reserves required by law these companies showed an underwriting profit of $5,742,065.

profit of only 2-10 of 1 per cent. The Mutual companies made a profit, all of which by the way belongs to the policy holders, of 27.6

In the face of these figures the average insurance agent insults your intelligence by telling you that Mutual companies are not well managed: We wonder why.
