Professor Edward Ross, Wisconin University, in a recent book entitled: "What is America-" takes for the key-idea the words of George Mason, of Guston Hall, Virginia found in the Virginia Bill of Rights "Without a firm adherence to Justice, Moderation, Temperance, Frugality and Virtue, no free government of the blessings of liberty can be preserved to any people." Those words savor of a sermon.

Ther are self-evidently true which should be the distinguishing feeture of every sermon. In 142 years of America's experiment it has been shown repeatedly that the nation moves forward only on the high rough of great principle. God has shown in the evolution the race the futility of all school of government, the failure of all ligious ideas which do not analyze into the old fashioned virtues. Still tower like the mountains which gave them birth, the Ten Commandments, and the social program of the Sermon on the Mount. Significantly our national ideals are religious principles. Aiways the slogan has been a call to Equity. We upo were never paltry enough to go into cheap bombast and vaunt of arrogant superiority. We have become wise ercugh to know that God has no pet mations, clans, religion. God is — Fair Play.

Lincoln said it when he announced that it was only important to sire that he was on God's side. Highteousness exalteth a nation; justice and mercy show that we are on His side. America began in the heart of God-fearing fold first, was a kingdom in fact in the vision of the first colonists. If it had not been so we never would have been the nation we are to-day. So long as religion, that For the servants of the God-of-Allis to say, a recognition of the sovereignty of God is exalted; selong as men and women form families as social asset, we may be assured of the counsels of the Almighty and His Such
