AFTER THREE YEARS

TINE out of every ten jobs of printing are designed to sell something, either goods or ideas.

Whether or not a printed booklet, for example, accomplishes its purpose is determined by the results secured by its distribution, whether those results be in the form of orders secured---good-will increased, or ervors eliminated.

The problem for every Advertiser, therefore, is to find the Printer or Printers whose work will produce these results. The choice of a Printer in the past has all too often been made on a basis of price competition—in other words—too many Printers were order-chasers and the Advertiser having little confidence in any printing by reason of this "order-chasing" bought the cheapest.

Today, however, the Printer recognized as a business counselor. He is in a position to offer his experience and constructive ideas to the Executive that is epen-minded and appreciates the fact that quality printing, even costly printing may be the most economical in view of the results that are desired.

Perhaps no more striking evidence f the general acceptance of the new era in the printing industry can be found, than the series of full page advertisements of the American Writing Paper Company, the world's largest makers of fine papers. L each of these advertisements, you will find emphasized these recommendations to all Buyers of Printing:

Do not get twenty competitive bids from twenty Printers and give the Select your Printer on the basis of service rather than price. Furnish him with a basis for constructive criticisms and suggestions, and then maintain a permanent business relationship with him. Let your Printer co-operate and work with you rather than merely work for you. Be open-minded to your Printer's suggestions. Your Printer is the one best qualified to select the right paper for the
