THE COMMUNITY BELL WETHER

IVERY farmer who raises sheep A knows to what the above refers. The "bell wether" is the leader of the flock. He usually wears a bell, and wherever he and his bell go thither his flock obediently follows. For good or ill, to safety or into danger, where he leads they go. In he happens to be a wise old fellow his followers profit by his wisdom, to make no effort to improve on the but if he develops vicious and unreshort-comings and failures of those liable traits disaster is almost certain to overtake the flock.

It's a poor way when, traveling it, Have you ever paused to think we drop into the ruts worn by the how like sheep are we humans in this vehicles of our fathers, and fail to respect? TINE out of every ten jobs of printing are designed to sell something, either goods or ideas. Whether or not a printed booklet, for example, accomplishes its purpose is determined by the results secured by its distribution, whether those results be in the form of orders secured---good-will increased, or errors eliminated.

The problem for every Advertiser, therefore, is to find the Printer or Printers whose work will produce these results. The choice of a Printer in the past has all too often been made on a basis of price competition—in other words—too many Printers were order-chasers and the Advertiser having little confidence in any print-recognized as a business counselor. He is in a position to offer his experience and constructive ideas to the Executive that is open-minded and appreciates the fact that quality printing, even costly printing may be the most economical in view of the results that are desired.

Perhaps no more striking evidence of the general acceptance of the new era in the printing industry can be found, than the series of full page advertisements of the American Writing Paper Company, the world's largest makers of fine papers. each of these advertisements, you will find emphasized these recommendations to all Buyers of Printing:

Do not get twenty competitive bids from twenty Printers and give the work to the man with the lowest estimate. Select your Printer on the basis of service rather than price. Furnish him with a basis for constructive criticisms and suggestions, and then naintain a permanent business relationship with him. Let your Printer co-operate and work with you rather than merely work for you. Be open-minded to your Printer's suggestions.

It is our policy to get results through a combination of customer's ideas and our own experience, by giving those ideas expression in the right type, ink and paper
