Sort Ears Carefully uniform type, shape and size used for, seed purposes. Such ears should be nels, and well dried.

Shelling is usually done by hand, he tested for germination. When one, has developed the type it is well to produce at least twice as much seed as will be necessary for home plant ing, since something may happen to the crop the next year and this extra seed can be carried over. Continued selection and careful growing will be ecessary in order to maintain the desired characteristics.
