Certain cities have been made into under the impulse of the welfare under the impulse or the weitare ideal.

Immortality is rather certified—consummation of the plan of God who would not fail to open gates for those He loves. The human race has come up thru long processes of evolution, and the process looks toward the highlands.

The ethical impulse once like a commercial transaction—hope of heaven—has been discovered, as we have come to understand Jesus, to be based upon a necessary recognition of the friendship obligation that accompanies developing minds. The capacity of friendship certifies an unbreakable relation with God.

THE FAILURE

Forth came the man girded with truth, a coal from off God's lips hot upon his mouth, his eyes blazed with the flame of the morning.

He dreamed that people hungered and thirsted for the Eternal's bread and wine, waited the sound of the fifes and drums of liberty, the truth of the streets that stank of mingled blood and sweat and dust he came forth chanting a hymn of Beauty.

Ged! Can one forever buffet the air? Outshout the clack and clang? God! What can one say to those who prefer darkness?

Can one lift a rouse of courage into those who have no dreams and no desires! And pipe for any to'those who will not dance — how long? Shall one forever feed fires with one's own precious blood to light the starroads for those who are well content with caves and jungles?

And laughing folk hew them a goodly cedar tree, bake bread by it, and warm by it— and of the residue make them a god.

Great God who writhest in the reek of darkness stretch forth Thy Hand.

Of gaunt years strowing —
The the best I can bring, Good Master.
Oh, but my sheaf of dreams is vast;
See what it is holden fast,
Clutched and clung to spite blight and disaster.

BUT NOT IN VAIN

Howbelt one may not be ploughed under in vain.

Is it not so men o' war, prophets, poets, lovers, saviors?

Speak from your stars you who want to God;

By the round-about, long-road, dark road, red-road — home?

Is it worth the blood, Lord Jesus,

To walk the open roads and have the right

To know and enter in and sit at the hearth?
