

Among Our Neighbors

South Hill

Mar. 2. — It was a real "lamb," and the "lion" may be expected later. Only three or four patrons put in an appearance at South Hill telephone meeting, in Andover, Saturday. A large attendance was much desired as it seems really necessary, for good service, to reconstruct the line through.

John Lever, of Andover, drove over the hill Monday with the state inspector of dairies.

Miss Nell Horan, of Andover, spent Tuesday at the farm home with her brother, Leo.

Francis and Patrick Casey are moving to the Harrington farm, of Vorcees Hill, which they will work the coming season, with their farm here, moved to market this week.

Ed Lynch has been nursing a very sore foot for a week, caused by stepping on a rusty nail, while at work rebuilding his barn on the Welsh farm.

Elmer Coats, assisted by Clarence Broghan, is drawing his potatoes to market from the Horan farm.

It was indeed with regret that our people heard of the death, in the prime of life, of Thomas Gavin, while on a business trip to California. "Genial Tom" was well and favorably remembered as a former South Hill boy, who was born and reared in this locality, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Gavin. In early manhood he left the farm home, "to hoe his own row" as a laborer in the oil fields, and so successfully had he hoed his rows, that he had advanced to the front ranks in the oil industry. His home was in Tulsa, Okla., and the family have the sympathy of his former friends and schoolmates here in the great bereavement.

The Ladies Aid meet with their president, Mrs. Bessie Sweet, next Thursday afternoon.

Alfred

Mar. 1. — The presentation of three plays by the Junior Class last Thursday night, in Fireman's Hall, was a remarkable success and brought to light some unsuspected talent. A fairly large and appreciative crowd saw the curtain go up on the first play, and tragedy, "Riders to the Sea," by Corthers, at 8:15 o'clock. This tale of fisher-folk on the coast of Ireland had no distinct plot but rather tended on the atmospheric and was put across quite effectively. Cynthia Hunt as Maurya, the bent and broken-hearted old mother who had borne bravely the loss of her six stalwart sons at sea, probably created more of this typical atmosphere than any other of the actors and was remarkably fitted to her role.

Florence Bowden showed a bit less adaptability, but was very good in her role of Kathleen, Maurya's daughter, and acting difficult passages commendably and portraying well the moods of these sad-hearted set dwellers who learn to fight life's hardest battles bravely or if not bravely, dumbly.

Margaret Glasbey, as Nora, the other daughter, deserves a goodly share of praise, depicting the bewilderment and numb grief that children feel for things too big to understand.

Clair Peck, as Bartley, the sixth and last son to be drowned while fishing, was especially suited to his role and carried it out with credit.

The second play was a comedy "The Rector" by Synge, and produced peals of laughter throughout. Robert Clarke, the small town preacher, seemed to have a thoro understanding of how a man in this position with a retinue of busy-body, gossiping, female advisors would feel and act. This little comedy was realistic in the extreme even to the very finish when the rector, fully aware of his need of a capable, efficient and economical wife proposes to the most frivolous girl in his parish. Most of the play is taken up by a committee meeting for the decision concerning the carpeting of the village church. The characters in this play were taken as follows: Robert Clarke, The Rector; Laura Stillman, Mr. Lemmingworth; Anna Crofoot, Margaret; Betty Ayars, Victoria Knox; Helen Sheppard, Janie; Katherine Newisinger, Mrs. Munsey; Audrey Haynes, Miss Trimble.

Another mirth-provoking comedy, "Rosalie," by Mawry, completed the program. The setting in this play was more attractive than the others; perhaps, since it was the parlor of Monsieur Bole, who waited impatiently the arrival of an honored guest, Monsieur Poplot. Don Burdick as Monsieur Bole has a double task, that of portraying the character of the unseen guest who never appears and expressing at the same time the personality of the conceited gentleman, Bole, himself. Mildred Faulstich, Rosalie, the maid, played her part effectively. Rosalie, stupid, unsophisticated and stubborn, contrasts directly with Monsieur and Madame Bole, who are nervous and excited over the expectant guest. The role of Madame Bole was taken by Mildred Allen and was very well done.

The program left a pleasant impression with the audience and the Junior Class is to be commended for displaying splendid amateur acting, also the freshmen who assisted. Prof. Ray Wingate sang during an intermission accompanied by Mrs. Joseph Seidlin and Benjamin Volk gave a violin selection accompanied by Nelle Ford.

The Junior Class of the Agricultural School will present the one-act play, "Neighbors," at Fireman's Hall, to-morrow night. It is a comedy, the cast as follows:

Grandma, Helen Chaffee; Miss D'Anthony Abel; Mary Prentice; Ezra, Duane Anderson; Peter, Leland Rosier; Inez, Lillian Martin; Miss Elmira Moran, Martha Tilden; Miss Trot, Genevieve Button; Miss Cary Ellsworth, Jessie Gould.

Mrs. Zaneta Dibble visited friends in Hognell and Andover over Sunday.

Miss Winifred Howland, of Wellsville, and Frank E. Bladergrover, of the Agricultural School, were married last Wednesday, at Andover.

Mrs. Lillian Place gave a talk before the Home Nursing Class, last Wednesday, on "The Duties of The Community Nurse."

Miss Cheesman went to Avoca Thursday where she spoke at the School Community Club on "Home Economics in the High School."

Mrs. John R. Groves

Mrs. Charlotte Dowse Groves died at Coudersport, Feb. 19th. She was born at Brookfield, in 1844 and graduated from Alfred University in 1870. After her graduation she was preceptress of Ladies Hall and instructor of languages at Alfred for three years. In 1873 she married Mr. Groves who was then a teacher of mathematics at Alfred. Mrs. Groves was well known among the older alumni and will be mourned by many friends.

All those who are expecting to attend the New York Alumni banquet, at the Park Avenue Hotel, New York City, March 19th, are asked to notify either Harry W. Langworthy, president, or Roy Cottrell, secretary.

The death of Mrs. Corliss Randolph occurred last week, at her home in Newark, N. J. Mrs. Randolph is a graduate of Alfred College, Class of 1888. Her husband, who survives, is a trustee of the college.

Miss Margaret Banghart, a senior at the university, was taken to the Steuben Sanitarium, at Hornell, last week, for treatment. She will probably remain there for a few days longer. Last Sunday the following went to see her: Leah Clarke, Evelyn Tenneyson, Isabel Mack, Emma Schroeder and Margaret Newisinger.

Miss Dorothy Loyd entertained her sister over Sunday.

GENERAL RULES FOR DRAPING WINDOWS
Lace is designed to draw the windows. In most cases it should be hung close to the glass and within the window frame. In length they should reach to the sill. Used in the form of curtains, the window lace can be drawn aside or cover completely the whole window as one wishes.
Inside draperies or over-draperies are designed to cover the window frame and, contrary to lace, have only one purpose, to add color interest to the background.

The Real Dope On Big Milk Production

THE function of milk-making depends so entirely on the health and activity of the vital organs directly concerned, that the slightest loss of vigor in these organs affects at once both the quantity and quality of the milk.

Because Kow-Kare so quickly reaches and builds up the systems of production, it is best because it is generally used as an aid to production and a PREVENTIVE of its ailments.

Most cow diseases—such as Abortion, Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Scouring, Lost Appetite, Bunches, arise in an impaired condition of the digestive or genital organs. It is best these organs that Kow-Kare is designed to build up and restore.

Feed dealers, druggists and general stores sell Kow-Kare; 70c and $1.40 packages.
