

SIGN-BOARDS ON THE UP-ROAD

Hamilton B. Williams

The original meaning of "town" signifies himself; and in the universe of things, the town is measured by his own status. That was in the good old days when the world was emerging from the caves. The town-idea is a co-operative group, and may do better with folk than by living apart. We are gradually dis-in every way—and under the obligation of sharing. He is a proper citizen who wants every one to have the fullest holdings. He is still a simple hang-over who is content to be indifferent to his neighbors. The ultimate in religion is the development of a neighbor. One cuts a sorry figure in the world who hed-

A hundred years' tenting on Trail-ways Of King's Road, what's to show for God's trouble? There are houses and farmsteads And streets and a pother of business. There's much labor in planting The gardens and reaping; Much babble and clamor and fret In weighing and measuring goods. And last, quite alone and quite stripped We turn our steps outward; And give and bequeath (Oh liberal hearts!) Houses and gardens and streets To the tenancy of others.

Hast thou marked this, oh wiseman, That they who have striven to heap up the dust, Heap up dust—nothing more? But they that have striven to store treasure Eshewer the Town richer By dynamic of light!

What maketh a Town? If a stranger appeareth Some courteous Citizen offereth guidance. "This is the Main street, see marts Filled with jewels and garments and provender. That is the seat of exchange. There's the school-house, where youth learn to figure, And yonder's the leading church—best people. So he babbleth of bulk.

Fancy the Stranger were come From some far bar, say heaven— To learn what the children that cling To this motte-earth are seeking. He might say to the Citizen "This gold that filleth thy mouth With such jingle, we build our streets Of it in my Home-Town, use pearls For our gates and pile its walls High with jasper and sapphire and emerald, And sardius, beryl and topaz and jacinth, Chalcedony, chrysochryse, amethyst, Oh, earth-man, gold's

Not the man timg on the main street Of my Home-Town. A fine reckon thy gold A fine reckon to play the earth's game with, Not the game, though. There's too much travail of God In a soul, to waste it In heaping up dust how gilded soever."

"If thou chancest to come To my country, see that thy pack Is well filled with honor And virtue and neighbor's good word, For the gates there do not open To jingle of gold."

"Thy Town's its brave Straight-standing, unpurchasable men; Men above mire-lure and knee-crook; Men who do not stand at the Cross-roads With eyes on the Probable Issue; Men who fig not as the multitude Piffeth fast or slow; Men who are not ashamed to die poor In pelf and gear, if they have toiled The steep slopes up To bring down light for morrow's lighting.

"Thy Town's its women serene, And gentle, dove-hearted, dove-voiced; Whose breasts know the nestling of children; Whose hands brew balm for her man's hurt; Whose lips are a-sweet with praising; Whose hearth-place is altar; Whose deerways are gates To the garden of joyance."

"Thy Town is its children, Who play on the streets, Tenements of darkness or light. Ap' them maketh Tomorrow's Road-builders, Fire-keepers, Life-makers—salute us! Salute we Tomorrow's World-builders!

If silence of an hundred years Our stout forefathers' be, And they with wand and measure Walked the streets, we should hang On their words as if God spoke, What, think ye, they would say, Who came back from silence? Thy town's not made with hands."

A TOWN'S FUNERAL

A town that never has anything to do in a public way is on the way to the cemetery. Any citizen who will do nothing for his town is helping to dig the grave. A man that tusses the town furnishes the coffin. The man who is so selfish as to have no time from his business to give to affairs is making the shroud. The man who will not advertise is driving the hearse. The man who is always pulling back from any public enterprise throws bouquets on the grave. The man who is so stingy as to be howling hard times, preaches the funeral and sings the doxology. And thus the town lies buried from all sorrow and care.—Ex.

A dress form will save many dollars for the woman who wishes to economize in dressmakers' bills and clothing bills. Ask your home bureau agent of the State College at Ithaca how to make one.
