

They Work While You Rest

Industrious dollars busily engaged in turning out more and more dollars, never slowing down but always keeping up at the same speed—what a wonderful dream.

But it is no dream. It can be made a certainty if you will only set them at their task. You alone can do that, for dollars will not voluntarily continue themselves to hard labor. You must start them out and keep encouraging them.

The best method of encouragement is to give them friends. Dollars are extremely sociable and if you keep adding more dollars to your account they will fairly outdo themselves in productivity. Lonesome dollars get few results, so keep adding new ones to your account. The more they work the more you rest.

SCOVILLE, BROWN & COMPANY

This name is very familiar to our readers: Scoville, Brown & Company have been doing a wholesale grocery business at Wellsville for the last thirty-five years. For a quarter of the century they have done the largest mercantile business in the western half of the state outside of Buffalo and Rochester. Their name has come to mean a guarantee of excellent quality. Their Food Express is very busy making frequent delivery to the merchants, and this is a real advantage in providing fresh supplies. We can testify to the merits of their brands, especially teas and coffees, and take pleasure in commending a careful reading of their advertising which will appear in our local columns this spring. — Advertisement.

HORNELL PASTOR WILL PREACH

Rev. C. C. MacLean, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hornell, will speak at 10:30 in the Andover Presbyterian Church, Sunday morning.

Mr. MacLean is one of the strong men in the Presbyterian Church, and those who fail to hear him Sunday morning will miss one of the opportunities of their lives. It is not often that a pastor of his ability will leave his city congregation to come into the country for a Sunday morning service.
