Of Interest to Farmers

CUT SILAGE FINE AND SEAL THE SILO

Care in Storing More Than Repaid in Increased Feed Value Throughout the Winter
Now that the silage season approaches, the College of Agriculture at Ithaca advocates that the corn should be cut in small pieces, because it packs better in the silo and is eaten clean by stock without waste. The sections should not be longer than from one-half inch to an inch. It is acknowledged that this plan requires more power on the silage cutter, but the results justify having the machine set for the finer cut. This is only one of the many points necessary in having the silo machinery repaired and ready for use.
If a blower is used a distributing attachment is necessary, or a skilled helper should be assigned to the job of mixing and packing the material in the silo so that no soft pockets are formed.

When Water is Useful
Corn cut at the proper stage of maturity—the denting or glazing stage—should require no additional moisture, but if the crop has become too dry or has been frosted, water will add to keeping qualities and palatability.

To prevent decay at the top some farmers seal the silo with three or four loads of green corn from which the ears have been removed; some use other sorts of heavy green crops, while still others use sawdust. In Ohio it is common practice to cover the silage with floor sweeping of chaff and grain after threshing. The grain in the chaff will sprout, makes an excellent cover, and excludes the air from the silage. The practice may be good if the grain in the chaff does not have more value as a poultry feed. In every case, say the Cornell workers, it is advisable to soak the covering thoroughly with water and to tramp it regularly for several days after it has been placed in the silo.

LEAGUE ANNOUNCES POOLED PRICES FOR JULY MILK

Officials of the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association at a meeting recently held announced that the pooled price for the month of July would be $1.745 per hundred pounds. Of course, it is understood, as in the past, that this is for three per cent. milk at the 200-210 milk zone, with the usual differentials applicable to freight and buttermilk.

The pooled price for June being $1.455, an advance of $220 cents per hundred pounds over the June price is thus shown. In view of the present conditions, this is considered by farmers generally as most satisfactory, and reports from all parts of Dairymen's League territory proclaim a growing feeling of optimism.

It was also announced that there were on August 12th, 57,488 members in the League who have signed the pooling contracts, and that contracts continue to come in at the rate of fifty a day. About half of these are from producers who are selling milk to be used for fluid purposes while the other half are from those farmers whose production is used for the manufacture of butter, cheese, condensed and evaporated milk.

At the present time, apparatus for the manufacture of evaporated milk has been installed in the Vernon plant of the Dairymen's League. The Association is manufacturing this product at Burke, New York, and soon will be at Whitesville and at Milton, Pennsylvania.

That the sale of evaporated and condensed milk is exceedingly brisk at the present time was evidenced in the report of Mr. Harry Jones, director of sales, who announced that the League was now over-sold on this product to the extent of 50,000 cases.

Agrigraphs

Uncle Ab says that nobody can help forming habits, but they can try to form the right ones.

Don't store the pumpkins and root crops in the same place. The former need a drier atmosphere.

Selecting seed corn in the field where it grew gives the farmer a look ahead as to what his next year's crop may be.

It doesn't take a son of a prophet to tell that there's no profit in a cow that costs more to keep than her milk sells for.

The side shows may be all right—that is, if they are the all right kind—but after all it isn't the side shows that make the fair.

Give the boy some boards, a few nails, a hammer, and a saw and he can have more fun than a barrel of monkeys patching up the fences for the winter.

Soils if they are to be productive can't get along without humus. Clover crops turned under offer one way to supply it. They are especially needed where little livestock is kept and so the amount of manure is small.

Farmers have always co-operated. In the old days they co-operated through mutual aid societies. Today they have the Farm Bureau and

SOME FOLKS STILL MAKE SOAP AT HOME

Fat Can Be Used Economically in Preparing Laundry Aids of Known Purity

Altho spring soap-making as an annual process has almost gone out of fashion, the economy of occasionally transforming waste scraps of fat into soap for household use is still practiced in many homes. A formula for home-made soap, as given in a bulletin of the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, says to use a one-pound can of lye dissolved in three pints of cold water, five pounds of melted fat, one and one-half table-spoons borax, and one-half cup household ammonia. When the lye and water mixture is cooled, it is added to the fat and other ingredients and then stirred until thick. The resultant soft soap is poured into wooden or paste-board boxes lined with oil or waxed paper, and set away in a warm, dry place to harden.

Laundry Soap Jelly

As additional cleansing agents turpentine or kerosene may be used in a soap jelly for laundry purposes. The proportions to be used are one bar of hard soap dissolved in one quart of boiling water—with one teaspoon of kerosene or turpentine stirred in when the solution is cool. The kerosene or turpentine aids in dissolving fatty matter and thus helps to soften and loosen the dirt in clothes.

These and other facts about the home laundry are given in a new bulletin from New York's College of Agriculture at Ithaca. A post-card asking for H. 137, will bring a copy to housewives who are interested.

PICNICKERS NEED TO GUARD AGAINST FIRES

A Carelessly Tossed Away Match May Start Serious Forest Conflagration—Some Camping Hints

With the season for camping and picnics now in full swing, attention needs to be called to the danger of starting forest fires as a result of the carelessness of picnickers.

It is not only the person who leaves the campfire without having made sure it is extinguished who may cause damage, but also the smoker who carelessly tosses away a match which he supposes has gone out. The only safe way is to break the match in two before it is cast aside. If there is still any fire in it, the sensation of touch will give the smoker emphatic warning.

A cigar butt or cigarette, or even the contents of a pipe dumped out on the ground, is also a source of danger.

In choosing a place for the campfire one should locate it as far from inflammable material as possible, and not make a bigger fire than needs require. When camp is broken, it goes without saying that the fire should be put out with water; and to make absolutely sure that no sparks are left, it is well to throw earth over it, say the foresters at the State College at Ithaca, N. Y.

Paper Once Royal Gift

There was a time when only the nobility, the great personages of history, could enjoy the use of paper, and then in only the most meager quantities. Only 1,900 years ago Emperor Trajan of Rome was the delighted recipient of a magnificent gift consisting of 20 reams of paper from the emperor of China. In that age and time, 20 reams of the precious fabric was considered a royal gift indeed, and only a potentate with the vast resources of China at his disposal could afford to give a present of such value.

One can imagine the elation enjoyed by Trajan upon receiving so great a quantity of paper, and thus know that through such generosity he was to augment the number of volumes contained in his library.

Homespun Yarn

Early to bed, early to rise, a quart of milk daily makes bright, sparkling eyes.

Some folks use a duster of soft cloth and some are quite content to scatter the dust by using a feather duster.

Wash your canning troubles away. This is literally true, for imperfect cleaning is frequently the reason for spoiled fruit.

It's a pity to be crowded for cellar shelf room for the canned fruit, when a few minutes and an old packing box will make the best kind of a storage place.

Do your house furnishings really furnish service or merely take up room? Ask yourself this question of every object you handle when you clean house this fall.

Aunt Ada's Axioms: "Teach the children that there's a richness of mind as well as of pocketbook, and that the first kind of wealth in the long run is the best."

It tells how to do the washing economically and efficiently. Its title is "The Home Laundry" and the State College at Ithaca will send a copy if you ask for H. 137.

Seal the bottles of fruit juices and have double assurance they will keep. Equal parts of shoemakers wax and resin, melted over hot water, into which the bottle tops are dipped, will turn the trick.
