Teak Wood Highly Valued.
Teak, for some purposes the most valuable of all woods, is chiefly produced commercially by Burma, although it is also supplied by India, Siam and Java. As a plant, teak is remarkable for its large leaves, which reach ten to twenty inches in length and eight to fifteen in breadth, and are so rough that they are used for sandpapering. The trees often grow 80 to 100 feet tall, with a circumference of six to ten feet, the largest recorded log cut in Upper Burma in 1898, having measured 87 1/2 feet in length and yielded over twelve tons of timber. The wood varies from yellow or straw color to a rich brown when first cut, darkening on exposure; sometimes it has dark and almost-black streaks or veins. It is hard, and very durable.

RURAL SCHOOL CONFERENCE

Educators and Farm Leaders Will Discuss Problems of the Country Schools.
A conference on rural, one-room schools and rural village schools will be held at Hornell, on Saturday, September 17th at the High School building. This conference will be conducted by the Publicity Division of the Rural School Survey under the auspices of the Joint Committee on Rural Education and will last all day. There will be educators and farm leaders in attendance, of state-wide reputation, and discussions will be open to all. Largely attended meetings have already been held in various sections of the state and the discussions have been very lively and interesting as there is great diversity of views as to what should be done to improve the schools of the open country and the small village high schools.
The defunct township law which encountered such temper of criticism and protest will doubtless receive a large measure of attention. How to get efficient schools and maintain a large measure of local control is the great problem as many farmers see it.
