

Among Our Neighbors

South Hill

Sept. 14. — Having finished the oat threshing in this vicinity, the machines moved on until buckwheat is ready later.

Potato buyers have started business at $1 per bushel, and many growers have begun digging, the still early for the work.

Miss Lenora Dean returned Sunday to her school work in Salamanca, having been detained at home one week by illness.

M. T. Garvin, of Andover, was a business visitor on the hill one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Huggins and children, of New York, are visiting their mother, Mrs. Lizzie Huggins, and their son, Raymond.

The work of threshing here last week brought a number of interested Andover visitors. Messrs. H. Horan and R. McAndrew, Messdames Margaret Garvin, Rob. Dean, John Wahl and M. T. Garvin, and the Misses Eva McAndrew, Nell Horan, Loretta and Rose Harrington, all residents of Chestnut Street, a suburb of South Hill.

Mrs. James Dean and children spent Saturday night in Andover, guest of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Garvin.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Harvey were calling upon Mr. and Mrs. Appier Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Mila Pingrey was the guest this week at the home of her brother, A. M. Mingus.

Our residents were pleased to see Frank Holmes drive over the hill Tuesday, the first time since he was injured, and hope he will soon be able to take up his work again on the hill. He was accompanied by Mrs. Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker.

FOUND ANGLING GOOD SPORT

Many Notables Have Been Devotees of Sport Immortalized by Sir Izaak Walton.

When President Harding prepared himself for the responsibilities of his great office by spending a few weeks fishing in Florida he added one more to the long list of notables who have been devotees of that sport. It is recorded that Noah was not only a good boatman but a skillful angler as well long before the flood, and far away in the mists of time, there is a Babylonian legend that Belus, son of Ninrod, discovered fishing. The first authentic record of angling appears when the Lord asks Job: "Can't thou take out a fish with a hook?" The great Homer immortalized the art in the "Iliad" and "Odyssey," stating that godlike men, when pinched for dinner fished with crooked hooks, and even fished for oysters. It was Plato, the Greek philosopher, who once said: "There is nothing in angling that is noble, or daring, or requiring skill." Charlemagne, who dominated western Europe in the eighth century, advised his subjects to take up the art of angling in order to be content. "Be-cause," said he, "I have never yet known an angler who was melancholy."

But the greatest fisherman and philosopher of modern times is undoubtedly Sir Izaak Walton. In his "Complete Angler" he indicates the progress of fishing, particularly on lure fishing. He had a different color of fly for every month in the year. His books are a source of information for all, and it has been said that in them a child may wade and the latest giant swim. "Angling," said Izaak, "is like mathematics, in that it can never be fully learned, at least not so fully but that there will always be room for experiment by some succeeding angler." Detroit News.

THAT'S THE STORY HE TELLS

But It Certainly Was Unfortunate that the "Tonic" Should Explode When It Did.

An Indiana manufacturer recently enjoyed a restful Sunday in the quiet of his own home, a steady downpour of rain giving every assurance of his not being disturbed. Early in the evening, however, he concluded a little walk would be beneficial, and remembering his wife having mentioned she was in need of another bottle of her favorite spring tonic, he decided a raincoat and brayed the elements.

Pocketing his purchase, and homeward bound, he thought to have a look in on the evening service at the church of which he was a devoted and valued member. Standing in the rear of the church, as there was an unusually large congregation, he became much interested in the sermon, when to his horror there came a terrific bang, followed by a deluge of foam flying in every direction; all eyes were turned his way and the sermon temporarily discontinued while the erstwhile devout church member beat his hasty retreat amid the laughter of the entire congregation, having an opportunity to explain that he was carrying home a harmless bottle of "tonic" for his wife.

attending the Forty House Devotion in Wellsville.

Mrs. D. W. Driscoll Jr., Mrs. J. F. Rockwell and daughter, Catherine, returned to Whitesville last Friday where they were calling on Mrs. Alex Resette.

John, Edward and Catherine Roach of this place, also Mr. and Mrs. Frank Arnold, of Buffalo, have returned home after spending a week motoring thru Bradford, Kane, Pittsburg and many other places in Pennsylvania.

This is a busy time for every one, corn to cut, buckwheat to get in and threshing for the men folks to do, while the women are kept busy with canning and pickling.

Mrs. Jack Deery and infant son, Jack Junior, of Buffalo, are spending two weeks as guests of Mrs. James Deery.

Catherine Rockwell left Sunday evening to begin her work as school teacher near Belmont.
