LITTLE THOTS ON BIG TOPICS

WHY is it so many public officials think invariably of self and so seldom of the public welfare?

That question has been asked by millions of people many millions of times, yet the answer is simple.

Our political system creates politicians instead of statesmen, men who too often exploit the offices they hold for their own and their party's welfare instead of administering them for the ultimate good of all.

If every man and woman of America who believes in placing men of character and integrity in public office would go to the trouble of voting the spoilsman would soon cease to be a menace.

There is no question but what the great majority of our people want good men in public positions, but it is a far cry from wanting them there and going to the polls and placing them there.

What, then, is the remedy? Compulsory voting! The man or woman who enjoys the right of franchise and is not patriotic enough to exercise that right by voting should be compelled by law to do so.

How could such a law be enforced? Again it is very simple.

Let the penalty for failure to vote be the loss of franchise if the person is without property, and without legitimate excuse, or an increase of 25 per cent in his assessment, if a taxpayer.

The man or woman who is in the habit of voting could have no valid objection to such a law. Others need it in order to far them into realizing the responsibility of citizenship.

WE of America have received, welcomed and honored Ferdinand Foch, Marshal of France, most illustrious general of his time, and rival of Napoleon Bonaparte and Alexander the Great.

He is the greatest soldier on earth to-day, and now he has seen the greatest country on the earth. But seeing is not understanding. The famous marshal has yet much to learn of America, and of her people, and of their habits and customs. And without this knowledge there can be no correct understanding.

France should also send her keenest minds of the commercial world to our country, men who will investigate and appreciate the methods by which we have sprung from an infant nation to a position of commanding power among the peoples of the world, and that within a few short years of time. It would serve to remove the feeling of suspicion and antagonism which many of the French entertain toward us, and which is felt to a considerable extent in this country toward the people of France.

We do not understand the French, and the French do not understand us. That was clearly demonstrated when our troops came in contact with them during the World War. It left anything but the friendly feeling both nations could desire.

Great generals win battles and save countries when their people are at war, but it requires the keen vision of the productive genius to maintain a nation on a prosperous plane in times of peace.

The two great republics of the earth should have a closer understanding, both politically and commercially. Each has much to learn of and from the other. Both would benefit from the contact.

Let the welcome visit of the victor in war be followed by others from victors in the realm of peace.

We need it, France needs it, and neither has anything to lose from a broader knowledge and understanding of the other.

AS THE EDITOR SEES IT

THE Japanese ambassador at Washington is refreshingly frank and to the point. He suggests that the Americans and Japanese could come to a better understanding if the practice of backbiting could be eliminated.

Possibly he is right, but we imagine his remarks would be applicable to Japan as well as to this country.

Nations and people have a right to express their opinions in a straightforward and manly way, and it is not to be expected that they will always agree. But backbiting is conducive to friction and trouble. No good ever comes from it.

If we don't want our women to marry Japanese men that is our business. If the Japanese don't want our men to marry their women, that is their business. Neither has a right to object, altho we understand that is one of the reasons the Japanese have for their feeling of resentment toward us.

Our cards are on the table, gentlemen of Nippon. Put yours there and we will have less cause for future trouble.

OUR national capital is overflowing with the keenest minds of the nations of the earth, sent by their governments to advise with the delegates to the disarmament conference.

When the conference ends it would be well if each of these specialists could make a tour of this country and study closely our American methods of doing business.

All of the wisdom of the world of commerce is not centered in the countries across the water. The fact that America has grown from an infant to a giant within a short time would indicate that at least a portion of that wisdom is to be found in this land of freedom and progress. Europe might benefit by absorbing some of it. Certainly we would benefit from so close a contact with the wise men of other nations.

Then there is another side to the subject.

Foreign countries have reduced the cultivation of the soil and the practice of economy to a science. In this we have much to learn from them, knowledge that would be of inestimable value to us.

We of America are inordinately extravagant and criminally wasteful, with the average European or Asiatic is just the reverse.

We might well take many lessons from them in the development of agriculture and the practice of economy.

A closer interchange of ideas and thots would be beneficial to the peoples of both the old and the new worlds.

HOLD onto your liberty bonds. Don't let anyone esiole you into selling them for less than par. They are slowly but surely rising in value, and after the high rates of interest come down the bonds will shoot up again in value.

If Congress had the nerve to buck the financial tiger it would pass a law compelling every person to accept the bonds at par with accrued interest when tendered in lieu of currency.

That of course would not please the speculators in bonds, but it would be a boon to the millions of poor people who were induced to buy bonds "until it hurt."

THE indifference with which many people view the disarmament conference at Washington indicates that they do not fully realize that the future of this country may be swaying in the balance.

If the conference accomplished definite results we probably will enjoy a long period of peace. If they fail, another world war is inevitable in order to settle the political and commercial differences that are separating Europe and Asia with every nation of the east. In such an event the United States can not hope to escape.

This day is just what we can fit easily on the fence and watch the other fellows go to it. Some nation will be sure to kick the fence from beneath us, so the sooner the fence is up the better.

Put these weather strips on your doors and you will not lose coal in the stove.

Nobody seems to mind the long time between strikes when they are long.

Every man has his hours of death, but most of us lengthen them into days.
