Hamilton B. Williams

So like a white verberna
You were in God's Beautiful Garden
Of Yesterday.
Did you hear my soul singing The glory of Your Being?
There was a moment
When your eyes became pearl-gates Through which God smiled.
You were the wonder-flower,
So like a white verberna,
In the Beautiful Garden
Of Yesterday.

Spirit may not become static. As impossible to strait-jacket a growing tree as a growing life. The type of mind that is content with second-hand religion is the type that never leads. The type of mind that conforms is not the kind that opens up new ground in anything.
Thinking people do not regulate their lives by scripture texts or ready-to-wear codes — they seek the most dynamic spirit of life-unfolding and become vital in any contact.

There is no church except a group of people rallied to the ideals of Jesus. If this group shall have and hold a place in the community it must be the leader of the civilization forces.
Whatever things are of public value, of social understanding concerning quality of information about the universe, of the family of Truth, Peace and Joy — are the forces that make for civilization.
The life impelled by the Christ-

The distinction is not between old and new. Antiquity does not make a thing true, neither does newness; one should not cling to the old or seek the new because they are such. One should seek the truth — old or new.
It is true that this is God's Beloved universe in which He resides Friend and Comrade of every soul. To live in reference to God as Friend and Comrade is to have found the main highroad.
