VOL XXXVI NO
WILL BE CHARGED WITH MURDER

Victim of Assassin's
Henry F. Alford
cumbats at Bradford
Two Week's Fight

The News takes the following account of the slaying of Henry F. Alford, a former Andover resident, at Bradford, Pa., on Dec. 12th.

Henry F. Alford, of No. 10 Street, a well known old resident of this town, died at the hospital at 8:45 o'clock, the result of a stab wound inflicted by Joe Terwilliger, of Bradford, who stabbed him in the chest Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26th. Terwilliger was charged with assault with intent to kill, scheduled for trial at the present time.

Alford's death, the district attorney has decided to continue the trial until the results of Alford's autopsy are known.

After learning of the death of Alford, Attorney Potter stated to a representative of the News that he would change the charge against Terwilliger to that of murder in the first degree.

The stabbing took place at "Bungalow," where Terwilliger was gathered for the purpose of being arrested. From what could be learned, it is the supposition that Terwilliger was chasing one of the men present, when he was having a row, when Alford stepped from a bath tub into the path of the thrust of the butcher knife, intended for Grassl.

Alford told County Detention at the hospital a few days after the slaying, that the knife was planted in his back when he came out of the door. He was not prepared, and had no such thought, and had no self to some extent against the slayer of Grassl. He said blades were in his back.

Terwilliger had to have his body examined and the knife with the other Terwilliger, the prisoner claimed right along that he remembered just what the fracas which ended in the slaying on Alford, and was to know what transpired. However, at the local police station, it would not have happened that his row was with Grassl, not with the man who has it at death's door for two weeks.

The stabbing was performed by an old butcher knife which had the intestines of Alford, and was necessary and in the hands of Dr. Hogan, on whom it was necessary to have several inches of intestines, had every attention medical skill and for a time as if he might have a vessel such as was not the case. It stood that Alford has felt that he could not recover his wound.

Mr. Alford had been employed by L. S. Greer, contractor of Gilmore, and was highly respected by the men of the section who met the extremely tragic which has brought to an end the life of their friend, who was a man of big stature and was highly respected by many friends and family. The sympathy in their sorrow.

Deceased was born Dec. 1st at Independence, N. Y. He lived by a wife, Maudie M. and five children, three by his first wife, a daughter Virginia, two sons, George and Glenn, and two children by his second wife, Thelma and Kenneth A. Alford, N. Y., also by his first wife, Mrs. G. W. Alford.

THE CHEERFUL ONE

Oh, please excuse me back because I'm curious to see what's printed in this paper on the other side from me.
