WHAT ARE OUR TREES WORTH?

HAVE you ever thot of the value of trees to Andover in dollars and cents? Have you ever thot of them as an important asset to the town, particularly since the universal use of the auto for seeing the country? Some towns value their trees up in the thousands of dollars, and now that tree planting time is nearly at hand it may be well to h take stock of what we have and make plans for the future.

The suggestion by "Plain Bill" in a previous issue of the News, that we make a public holiday on or about Arbor Day and reset the Andover Park with valuable trees was a most wise thot. It will be growing in value most before we are aware of it a fine grove will be there in place of the desolate, limb-strewn slashing that it now is.

In all that has been said the past few years about tree conservation, public attention has been directed to our the family larder, clothe your body, forests. Trees have been properly emphasized as the first and swell your bank account from need in soil preservation thru storage of moisture and prevention of erasion, and thus shown to constitute the most important factor in production of food and raiment, as well as material for shelter.

This is as it should be. Nothing is more vitally connected with man's economic welfare, hence forest contive stage, where exceptional care servation should be preached and published until its practice becomes a cardinal point in the creed of good Amer-il icanism. At the same time we must not forget another phase of the trees value to man - its gifts of beauty,

Since time began the shade tree has been the changeproper use of his brains. He may go less and unfailing friend of the human race. With the gigantic road building programs before the different states of the country, plans should certainly be made now for the tree-lined approaches to every town.
