

Sign-Boards on the Up-Road

By Hamilton B. Williams

"Strong Son of God," sang Tennyson as the thot of Jesus as the Tall Man of the Race Eternal in the heaven of Ideal, swept over him. "See the Christ Stand," sang Browning as the thot of Christ's all-illuminating, all-interpreting, all-value-equaling personality marked for him the spiritual goal of the ages.

Well do we call Him Lord and Master for such He is; and blessed be God for loosing this dynamic, volcanic, life-generating soul into the world. In His light we see what we should be; in His power we shall become what God dreamed we shall be when we full grown men and women, tall with the tallness of Jesus of Nazareth — and our home-towns — For, beholding Jesus we see ourselves.

The Spirit of Jesus always lifts a soul into liberty. Tall men and women look above the rack and work of the conflicts of the little not-yet-grown-up animals whose narrowness, bigotry, selfishness, materialism, classism, clannism, load the world with problems, look above and see the Captain of the world's salvation building the roads for the feet of men and women of exalted hearts.

Jesus was so tall that he saw behind the veils — God-all-Father, all compassionate, working as hitherto on the universe-long consummation, the Glory of Life.

Jesus beholding all-values in proper perspective and relation came announcing Love to be the interpretation of life. This interpretation excited the animal-laughter of the blind selfists, even as now, and wearing of His voice, they gave Him — exit — into the world. There have been in all generations mad enthusiasts who believed Jesus to be the Truth, they set out to love the world! Darling! For them the axe, the stake, the gibbet, the hard bought ways, but they passed the torch to the generations following. The tall, great-hearted responded as always. They who hold the world to God to Every man's soul is his own, but many a cuss is dead willing to give it away to the devil.

Make a practice of really earning your small salary and you will soon be receiving a bigger one.

The hen gets the worm because she goes out and scratches for it. Take a lesson from the hen.

The most cheerful givers are not always the most lavish in their giving. They don't have it to give.

Many women believe in charity beginning at home. They don't like having to sponge on their neighbors.

When you go out to accomplish a thing, remember that success is waiting at the other end. But it will not move toward you.

Do one thing at a time, and do it well. Too many irons spoil the fire, and as a result they all get cold and are difficult to use.

The person who makes a practice of understanding the little things of life seldom has any difficulty in grasping the big ones.

When man himself becomes infallible it will be time for him to judge of the frailties of women. But until such time let him who is without sin cast the first stone.

If German marks keep on going down they will soon make an awful hole in the ground — or perhaps strike oil.

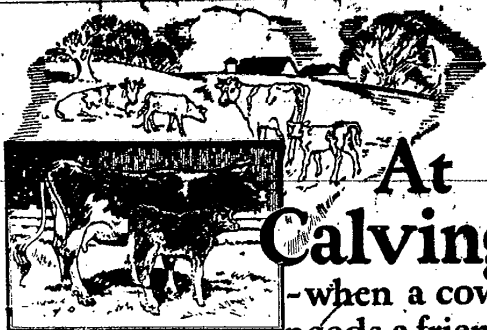

As long as you keep your secrets to yourself there will be no danger of other people spilling the beans.

Of course, there is a reason for some people not knowing their own minds. They have none to know.

It may be better to be a man's first love, but some women are convinced that it is safer to be his last.

Whenever a merchant offers you an article at a given price and makes no particular effort to sell it, you can generally figure that it is worth the amount asked. But it is often the case that alluring catalogue advertisements dwell mightily on the attractiveness of an article in order to corse up its weak points in serviceability.

At Calving - when a cow needs a friend

"The Home Cow Doctor"

—this is the title of a genuinely authoritative book on cow diseases, and how to successfully treat them at home. We want you to have a copy of this book, and will send it free on request. We merely ask you to return to give us the name of your local dealer. Drop us a postal today for your copy. The book has been worth hundreds of dollars to many cow owners by telling them just what to do at critical times.

NO NEED to tell you that calving is a severe strain on the vital organs of even the most vigorous dairy cow. In the shock and strain lurk many hazards to health and milk-giving.

The genital and digestive organs, carrying the burden of this function, need help. They need a real friend—before, during and after.

Here is where Kow-Kare comes in strong. It contains the medicinal properties to build up the genital organs to vigor, and regulate the digestive functions as nature requires. Because of its success in bringing cows safely thru calving in perfect condition its use in this emergency is known in most well-regulated dairies.

The use of Kow-Kare is neither expensive nor difficult. Just a tablespoonful of the medicine in the feed twice a day for two weeks before and for two or three weeks after calving. A few cents spent to assist nature will repay you with a healthy, productive milker and a vigorous calf.

Kow-Kare is equally effective in treating Retained Afterbirth, Abortion, Barrenness, Scouring, Bunches, Milk Fever, Loss of Appetite, etc. Many dairymen feed Kow-Kare one week each month to every cow, and realize big increases in milk yield thru the added vigor of the herd.

Try Kow-Kare and you will see it always. Feed dealers, general stores and druggists sell it. Large size $1.25, medium, 65 cts. Sent prepaid if dealer is not supplied.
