CUBA LAKE RESERVATION

Will Be Put Under Control of Allegany State Park Commission.
With Local Control — Proposed Change in Fishing Laws

Recent legislation in Albany has resulted in the enlargement of the Allegany State Park Commission from five to seven. The addition of two members has led to several changes in Western New York one of which will be the taking over of the Cuba Lake Reservation by the Allegany Park Commission. Heretofore Cuba Lake matters have been handled by the Conservation Commission with headquarters at Albany, but in the future the controlling supervision will be with the Allegany Park Commission and the two state properties being in the extreme western part of the state, can be better supervised by these local directors.

FEET

O when the day is near its ending, with all its earning and its spending, from shoes I draw my wearyippers, which all day long were tireless trippers, and stick them into comfy slippers. Then all my toes in joyful freedom, are glad to rest until I need 'em. I love to raise them up in air upon the arm of some stout chair. The blood which toward my feet was flowing now seeks my brain and sets it going; all thru my big broad dome it climbs and helps me write these rural rhymes. When young I loved to go bare footed in summer seldom shod or booted. When spring came sweetly o'er the lea, I yanked my stockings off with glee. In shoes no more my toes would huddle till autumn winds froze every puddle. The scratched by all the thorns I stuck, the nettled, bruised and stubble, stuck, I shed shoes early, always glad to, and wore them only when I had to. Those naked feet sought many a wood, on many a slightly hilltop stood, walked down the rows where corn was sowing and drove the cattle home to milking, the pleasant pasture, cow-paths kept, but used some care in where they stepped. All barefoot still I feign would scramble, in spite of nettle, briar and bramble; but now my foot, so slender then, completely fills a number ten and on the same, in shoes long dressed, by tough unyielding leather pressed, some toes point north and some northwest. I freely state this in my verse because, most likely, yours are worse. The only pretty feet, by aches, are found on statues and on babies.

LIGHTED HIGHWAYS REDUCE DANGER FROM GLARE

Thinking of Placing Electric Lights on State Highways for Safety

Illuminating engineers who have been studying the problem of reducing danger to road traffic and pedestrians from automobile headlight glare have decided that the solution lies in the development of highway lighting, not in changes in headlights. A committee of the National Electric Light Association, which has had this matter under investigation, believes that lighting systems applying to highways the illuminating principles embodied in regulation street lighting are best calculated to meet the needs of the situation.

With its 9,000 miles of improved highways, travelled by some 700,000 automobiles, New York State has this problem in an acute degree. Because of the congestion in many districts of the state, one-way traffic and parallel highways have been suggested as means of handling night traffic with safety. At present each car travelling along a country highway has to provide sufficient road illumination to permit stopping, passing other cars or changing the direction of travel. In order to do this the power of its headlights, must be high. This, however, introduces the element of danger to pedestrians, dazzled by the rays of the high-power light, and to drivers of horse-drawn vehicles and other automobiles. The severity of headlight glare is increased by contrast with dark. Local regulation of the degree of brilliance of headlight illumination has not proved effective in eliminating accidents.

It has been found that where highways are lighted by properly hung and properly spaced lights of approved street-illuminating type, accidents chargeable to anything save careless or reckless driving are few. Under such conditions the headlights can be dimmed and there is no dangerous glare from them, and no confusing contrast between the concentrated illumination and the surrounding districts.

SMITH'S MESSAGE TWO BAD FIRES AT BARS MOVIE CENSORS HORNELL SUNDAY MORNING

Governor Sends Legislature His Plan for Reorganization.

Albany, Feb. 26. — Governor Smith to-night sent to the Legislature his message of statutory consolidation and reorganization of the State government.

Two types of consolidation are proposed. The first calls for total abolition. In this category the bodies and commissions which Governor Smith would wipe out are the motion picture censorship commission, port wardens, commission on State and Federal taxation, salary classification commission, commission to examine feeble-minded, commission on West Side improvement and harbor matters.

In the second group, involving consolidation of functions and regrouping of agencies, the most important involves the creation of a new department of public works, consolidating engineering and public works activities, now scattered. This will replace the present system of control.

Of the first group, Governor Smith said:

"There is no need to transfer the function of this group elsewhere. The motion picture commission can go out of existence without anyone feeling its loss. It should be abolished, and a bill to accomplish this is already introduced."

Commissions Overlap
The port wardens have been many times recommended for abolition by myself, and even my predecessor suggested that they served no useful purpose."

The second group includes consolidation of functions, regrouping of agencies and in some instances abolition of the agency with the transfer of some or all of its functions to another existing agency.

Those abolished but with functions transferred include the miscellaneous reporter, the State Board of Equalization, Commission to Examine Voting Machines, and the Commission on Sites, Grounds and Buildings.

These functions are at present discharged by the State Engineer and Surveyor, Superintendent of Public Works, the Canal Board, Commissioners of the Canal Fund, the Highway Commissioner, the State Architect, Trustees of Public Buildings, the Interstate Bridge Commission, the New York Bridge and Tunnel Commission, and commissioners of the river regulation districts. These boards and commissions all deal with engineering of public works.

Four Proposed Bureaus
In the proposed reorganization only the constitutional boards and the state engineer are left out and the Waterpower, Commission and Water Control Commission will be dealt with when the state's water-power policy is established.

The four proposed bureaus in the proposed new department under the Superintendent of Public Works are: Highways, Canals and Water Control Architecture and Housing and Public Buildings.

Recommendation that the Parole Commission and the Probation Commission be abolished and their functions transferred to the Prison Commission is made; the present membership of the commission to be increased from seven to eleven members. The four new members are to be the four members of the present Probation Commission, who are not its ex-officio members. The Prison Commission is to arrange with the Superintendent of Prisons to discharge parole functions.

Creates Park Council
A State Park Council is to be created in the Conservation Commission.

The council is to consist of representatives from each region of the State, such as the head of Palisades Inter-State Park, Albany Park, State Reservation at Niagara, president of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, director of the State Museum heads of the Roosevelt Memorial Park and the Finger Lakes Park Commission.

The Governor's conclusion was as follows:
"The adoption of the suggestions made in this message will undoubtedly make easier the work of the Legislature and will relieve the various state officers from the Governor down of a good deal of present-day labor in connection with the management and the detail of all of these activities."

Hornell Lumber Company's Plant and Nugent's Store Burn to the Ground

Hornell, Feb. 26. — County authorities and city police, aided by insurance underwriters to-day began an active investigation to determine the origin of the two disastrous fires that swept this city Sunday. While the big mill and yards of the Hornell Lumber Company were being swept by the hottest fire the city has ever known, another blaze developed in the garage of former Sheriff Frank L. Nolton, more than a mile away. The two fires took a loss that will probably exceed $150,000. Two stores, the mill, a house, two garages and two barns were burned to the ground and only the shifting of the high wind saved many city blocks from being wiped out.

The office and warehouse of the Hornell Lumber Company was discovered in flames at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Before the firemen could reach the scene the flames had swept to the mill and soon the entire plant was a roaring furnace. Fire swept to the two-story grocery store of Edward Nugent adjoining and to the home of Samuel B. Whitney.

Then the wind suddenly changed and began sweeping toward the river, where the fire burned itself out after the entire area had been laid waste. Every bit of fire apparatus in the city and every foot of hose was in use when an alarm was turned in from East Avenue and the city line.

Fire had started in the Nolton garage and was blazing furiously. Seven automobiles inside lent fuel to the flames. An appeal was made to the Erie railroad and the private fire department of that company was called out and furnished hose and equipment. The fire spread to the Nolton home and then the store, leveling all structures to the ground. The homes of Delbert Minard and of William Freeland were badly damaged and the big plant of the Kayser Silk Company across the street, was in great danger.

The lumber plant fire burned all day Sunday, huge piles of lumber feeding the flames. Five automobiles and a horse in one of the company's barns went up in flames. While the two fires were in progress a false alarm was sent in from Hornell Street, two miles away and the police believe that the same fire-bug may have been responsible for all of the alarms.

A panic prevailed as the fire swept along lower Main Street and many families moved their household goods into the street, believing that several blocks would be ravaged by the roaring flames. The fire leaped so high that the whole city was illuminated and at one time it seemed certain that help would have to be asked from other cities. Hundreds of volunteers aided in battling the flames.

Snow had fallen an hour before and covered the roof tops, saving scores of houses from catching fire when great embers were sent spinning thru the air by the gale.

The heat from the blaze was so intense that telephone poles were burned and long distance service was suspended until late in the afternoon when emergency crews rushed here from Elmira succeeded in putting in new cables. Electric light wires were burned away and the city plunged into darkness.

PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO THE UNION CAUCUS

"Plain Bill" Suggests Opening a Box of Matches to Cause Excitement.

Union Caucus Saturday evening!

I wonder what it's a union of. The Republican and Democrat parties you say. Oh yes, and they nominate candidates from both party's do they? Well, well, I have been looking the Present Officials over and I wonder which one belongs to the Democratic party, or isn't a Democrat capable of holding a city office, or is it that they won't, which. Of course it gives us common people more of a choice when there is only one ticket. We have the choice of voting for who we are told too or staying at home. In the old days we had a ward boss who said who could run for office and that usually settled it, but at the present date we have a caucus where we all go and nominate the best man we can think of for the office and then vote on it, and of course the best man wins. Like hell! If any one will tell me the difference between the old system and the present I'll buy them a drink. Excuse me, I meant a stick of gum.

You will have to hand it to our Republican bosses for being up to snuff. If we had two tickets inside the corporation the Democrat would stand a good show of winning, so we have a union ticket, while in the whole town the Democrats stand no show at all, so there we have two tickets. Oh well, what's that got to do with the caucus Saturday evening. Of course it's all settled who will be our next officials, whether we go to the caucus or not, but as long as it don't cost anything, let's all go. Someone might open a box of matches or something to cause some excitement.

PLAIN BILL

YEAR BY YEAR IN EVERY WAY U. S. GETS DRYER

Enforcement Machinery is Slowly Becoming More and More Efficient.

America will get drier and drier if the next administration follows in the footsteps of the present administration, for a system of prosecution an enforcement is being built up which is bound to get results, especially as the states lend their cooperation.

Whatever one thinks about the merits of prohibition, or about the wisdom or unwisdom of the laws now on the statute books; whatever one may hope for in the way of modification, the pleasant or unpleasant truth is that the arm of the law is drawing closer and closer, and with the assistance of a changing public sentiment in many communities, is making substantial progress.

Passage of a prohibition amendment to the federal constitution looked impossible to thousands of persons in wet states. But it came. Enforcement looks similarly impossible to many of the same people. But it, too, is coming. Whether the extinction of the whiskey traffic will hasten the day of wines and beer can only be conjectured. The "wets" or "liberals," as they like to call themselves, think absolute prohibition will bring back a light beverage for table use.

The "drys" are convinced that once the law is enforced, the moral and economic benefits will become so deeply impressed on the public mind, that the majority will never wish to turn back, and that even Europe, not from a sentimental viewpoint, but from stern economic necessity in order to compete with dry America, may some day be compelled to do what the war taught many nations, namely, that a restriction of the liquor traffic begets efficiency.

This is a dry era in government. Few people in it expect change for some time to come. The dominant thought is that "America will get drier and drier year by year. With that objective in mind the effort to enforce the law grows gradually more sincere and effective, at least on the part of those who are charged with the specific responsibility for the job of making America dry.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A birthday party was given Mrs. Wm. Pease Wednesday evening, Feb. 28th, at her home on Greenwood Hill, by a company of thirty neighbors and a sleighload of friends from Andover village. A most enjoyable evening was reported by those in attendance. A fine supper was served. Mrs. Pease was the recipient of numerous gifts from her friends.

HERMAN WIDGER ILL

Herman Widger was taken ill Monday and the attack became so acute that Dr. Cleary took him to the St. James Hospital at Hornell that evening for treatment. A consultation of physicians decided that an operation for removal of the appendix was necessary. A diseased kidney complicated the trouble to such an extent that it was decided to take him to Elmira to a specialist, Dr. Busch, which was done Thursday. His mother, Mrs. Getta Widger, accompanied him.

Mr. Widger is a young man of fine physique and character and his many Andover friends are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the examination.
