The SUGAR BOWLShiver and Shake

That's what a lot of people do—shiver and shake—the day the first cold snap arrives. And they will shiver and shake all because they forgot—put off, neglected, waited—to have their heating plants put in order.

It's a poor plan to buy a lock for the garage after the car's been stolen. And it's just as poor a plan to wait until cold weather to have your heating system tuned up for winter.

People who care about their health go to a doctor at least once a year and have him examine them.

Your heating plant needs the same kind of examination. You know the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine."

Have your heating plant looked over today. At the same time have a heat regulator put in, and save enough coal to pay for it.

Winter will soon be here. This is the last warning. Have your heating system put right—right now—or expect to shiver and shake.
