Dividends or Disappointments?

CONSIDER what you will get out of the furniture you buy when you consider how much to put into it! When you buy quality furniture the balance is overwhelmingly in your favor. Where the price is deceptively short you are the one who receives the short end of the transaction.

For, fine furniture is not high-priced—it costs only a little more than furniture that is high at any price.

Our furniture pays increasing dividends of satisfaction as the years go on. That is the only kind to buy—unless you wish to buy disappointments.

The Romance of Furniture

THE "Drunkard's Chair" dating from the age of Good Queen Anne, tells eloquently of the frailty of the flesh and the temptations to which it yielded.
