OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

DAIRY PROFITS COME FROM CUTTING COSTS

Economy in Production as Well as Increased Prices Included in Ways to Make Money.

One way to make more money in dairying is thru economy in production; it may be as important a way as thru increased returns for the product sold. This is the opinion of many men who are closely in touch with the dairy situation in New York State.

It was pointed out at the state agricultural college at Ithaca this week that during the last quarter of a century there has been a notable increase in the production of corn silage and legume hay in this state. The college believes that this is a most encouraging sign, as these essential roughages furnish the basis for the most economical rations for New York.

The growing of grain mixtures for feeding, such as oats and peas, or oats, peas and barley is also said to make for economy in production. Careful tests have shown that the yield per acre is increased when these mixtures are sown, over the yields when only a single grain is grown by itself. The dairy farmer who can grow small grain mixtures containing Canada field peas, and who also has alfalfa and corn silage, finds right on his own farm nearly all the nutrients necessary for a good dairy ration.

The study of one farm where this practice was followed showed that in building up his ration this dairyman had to use only one pound of purchased feed, in the form of oil meal, to meet the standard requirements for maintenance and the production of forty pounds of four per cent milk.

GROW SMALL FRUITS FOR FAMILY'S NEEDS

State College Recommends Them for Health and Economy, and Offers Booklets on Cultivation.

The home orchard is being sadly neglected, despite the many good reasons why it should not be. Many fruit men at the state agricultural college. If for no other reasons, the healthfulness of fruit in the diet is enough to justify the care bestowed upon the orchard. At this time when everything purchased comes high, and the farmer wishes to cut down expenses, a home supply of fruit will not only be healthful but economical.

In those sections where the home orchard has been a discouraging problem, attention might be directed to small fruits. An apple variety will fulfill almost any individual need. For the typical family, the small fruits such as strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, currants, gooseberries and grapes will make the greatest appeal not only because they require less space and come into bearing early, but spraying and other cultural methods are more simple than for orchard fruits.

The college has recently published two new bulletins describing the varieties, planting and care of some of these fruits. They are on strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and dewberries. Copies may be obtained by addressing a card, asking for 56 and E 64, to the state college of agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

N. Y. GROWERS MARKET BIG WOOL CLIP CO-OPERATIVELY

A large share of the fleeces of New York from this year's shearing will go directly from the sheep grower to the mill for manufacture, a recent statement from the New York State Sheep Growers Co-operative Association shows. During the past four years over 2,000,000 pounds of graded New York State wools have been sold to manufacturers by this producers association.

The most recent wool pool closed in October. Together with the early pool it aggregated 470,000 pounds. Between 1800 and 1800 of the leading sheep growers of the state are members of the marketing association. There are branches in 38 counties, the statement shows.

Wool consigned to the early pool has been sold, but that from the later clip is held in the association warehouse at Syracuse until the markets are stronger. The producers receive the actual value of their wools, only the actual cost of grading and selling being deducted, according to the associations' statement.

CENSORSHIP A WORLD ISSUE

Have we learned nothing from the painfully bought lessons of 500 years? This is the question students of world history are asking, watching European chaos spread and our own country becoming infected with a dose of the universal ailment. They are asking if the age long struggle that has been waged to free the spirit of man from dictators and suppression of freedom, the work and sacrifice and effort of centuries of painful achievement, may have to be gone over again in a general collapse of civilization.

So keen and conservative a student of world politics as Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, declares that the war-weary world is seeking dictators and turning from democracy, in doubt and fear.

Freedom of the press and of speech and opinion, through which progress is alone possible, are menaced on every hand.

Russia, overthrowing its old autocratic government, is in the grip of a rigorous censorship of the press, of public opinion, and of individual freedom such as the old government would hardly have dared undertake. Italy in the grip of the Fascist is also suffering from censorship and suppression such as she has not known for a long period of time. Even the South American Republics have felt the reaction and Brazil has only recently passed legislation, looking to a stringent regulation of the press in its criticism of the government or foreign relations.

In our own state the censorship of motion pictures was established, even news reels being subject to the censor. And with that leverage, a bill was put before the legislature last spring which purported to aim at obscenity in books, but would have established a virtual censorship of the press and advertising as well as literature.

Advocates of that measure plan to bring it up again at the next session despite its defeat last spring.

Wherever censorship strikes root it grows and spreads like a fungus— toadstool-like, appearing over-night in new places. It becomes the instrument of political job-holders, the slaying of party politics, the weapon of sinister forces.

It is always un-American, in principle and practice alike. This country, depending on justice through courts and good laws has no room for such relics of "medieval ignorance, coming back out of the night of ages.

If the prohibition law had half the kick of bootleg booze there wouldn't be any B. B.

Business in this country may be suffering from a slight illness, but the crop of scandal is deliciously healthy.
