The best way to become popular is to do something to warrant popularity.

Some people are always talking about the temptation that comes their way. Others are strong enough not to recognize it.

No reputation will ever be spotless while people are able to talk.

Santa has opened his treasure bag in

And such treasures as he brings this Christmas will make any youngster's eyes dance with anticipation. Gifts for wee boys and girls—gifts for older children—he has brought in his capacious bag so many interesting things that we suspect the reindeer must have had a hard time carrying them.

DOLLS

Dollies for wee children who require much of mother's care. Others are quite big and can walk and talk. Dollies that will make every girl's heart jump with joy. And they may be chosen either with light hair or dark hair, curled or dutch cut, according to the little mother's desires.

RAILWAY SYSTEMS

Whatever kind of a railway system young engineers prefer they are represented here. There are small metal trains for very young children to be drawn with a string and elaborate railway systems with engines operated by electricity.

The Educational Value of Toys

Toys are a vital factor in the development of every normal child. Play is the chief business of childhood. Every instinct that flowers out in the prime of life begins early to show itself in play. It is often in play that vocational aptitude is revealed. Toys have been evolved by cumulative experience in observing the response of childhood. They reproduce on a miniature scale almost the whole world of industry.

The child needs a great variety of toys because he has a great variety of faculties urging him to expression and toys are the means of that expression. Some toys call for skill and mental alertness, some for imagination. Fortunately is the child whose toys are chosen with thoughtful appreciation of what they may mean to his life. How important that toys should be worthy of their opportunity and not be mere baubles that trifle with the enthusiasms of childhood.
