ALMOND MAN SENTENCED

In the February term of court at Belmont, Lewis Thomas was indicted for abandonment, pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced by Judge Ackerman to not less than one year in Auburn prison no more than two years. Sentence was afterwards suspended on Thomas' agreeing to pay $5.00 per week toward the support of his child who is living with its mother in Almond.

He Certainly Was

Tom's wife was commenting at length upon a love passage in the novel she was reading. She hesitated and then tentatively spoke.

"Were you embarrassed when you proposed to me, dear?" she inquired.

"Yes, darling," replied her husband. "I loved over $500."
