HOME NEAR COBA BADLY DAMAGED

The Cuba Patriot Tells of Pranks Played by Lightning.

The family of Floren Brown had a fortunate escape last Saturday evening when their home on Union Hill on the John Brown farm was struck by lightning and considerably damaged. That no fire resulted was also remarkable. When the bolt struck the family believed the house was falling, so great was the crash, and following it the rooms were filled with a dense cloud, as if of smoke so that the frightened inmates at first could not find their way about.

It struck one side of the house on the upper story tearing off the siding and breaking the windows. Miss Mildred Brown was lying on the bed in her room where the bolt fell. It shivered one of the windows, tore out the casing and hurled it across the room to the opposite side, where the lightning made a hole in the plaster near a door. All the plaster between the two windows was ripped off so that nothing remained of the outside wall for a considerable space except the lath, partly shattered. At the same moment it split the footboard in two and threw part of it upon the bed occupied by the young girl, who, however, was not in the least hurt.

The adjoining room was also damaged, the plaster of the outside wall being torn off in a large patch and the windows broken. No one was in this apartment at the time. In the attic the path of the lightning was shown running along a rafter and down a stud in the corner, which was shattered to the floor, where the bolt passed thru a pile of newspapers, without setting them afire.

On the lower floor the only damage was in the living room, where the telephone was wrecked and a hole torn in the wall above it. Near the rear door of the house a telephone wire was cut in two, and here the lightning spent itself in making an exit thru a rain barrel, which was riddled all around above the water line with small holes, as if from revolver shots. A good deal of siding was torn off the outside of the house and one piece was found hanging in a tree fifty feet or more from the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Floren Brown were down stairs at the time, and were not injured. John Brown was also in the house and had retired in a room upstairs which was not damaged. Nobody suffered any ill effects whatever from the bolt.
