IRON FALSE TEETH. WAR AND CRIME DOESN'T PAY. YOUTH AND LAWLESSNESS. SOME CAN'T WEAR 'EM.

The great Krupp concern, makers of big cannon on which the Kaiser's power used to rest, now manufactures false teeth of steel, enameled, the same steel that once went into fighting machinery.

Can you imagine anything stranger in history than the possibility of the Kaiser wearing a set of false teeth made by the Krupp? Not the same bite in that set as there was in the old cannon.

Two things never pay—crime and war. The big war cost two hundred and fifty billions of dollars, besides lives lost. The Chicago crime that attracts attention will cost at least $600,000. It's expensive, even for taxpayers. They will supply about $100,000 as their share.

The parents of the depraved youths that murdered young Franks will spend about $500,000.

That is the price of two young men's attempt to get $10,000 by kidnapping. Their two necks may be added to the total.

A Hollander is on his way to Marselles, a distance of 700 miles. To win a bet he must travel all the way turning somersaults. Starting in November, 1923, he has until next February 12 to finish the trip. About two million somersaults will cover the distance. The man is well padded, and seems quite happy, like many that think as he travels, also in somersaults.

Italy doesn't know what to do with her wine crop this year. She has not enough casks to hold it. Citizens can walk into a wine cellar and "drink as much as desired" for a few centimes.

Good prohibitionists will say, "What terrible drunkenness there will be in Italy." But they don't know the Italian people. They don't get drunk, whether the wine is cheap or dear.

Judge Talley says, "The United States is the most lawless nation, and most criminals are youngsters." That's just it. The United States is a youngster. Youth is always lawless. Lawlessness is terrible, but there is one worse thing, and that is stagnation.

Parts of the West that were once most lawless in the old gold fever days are now typically law abiding. This country will settle down. "There is a cure for exuberance, none for sterility."

Disease is one of earth's mysteries. And most mysterious is the trouble that Nature takes to protect disease germs against their enemies, including man.

For instance, the tubercular bacillus, which kills millions, lives encased in "a heavy capsule of fat," which gives it elasticity and protects it from its enemies in our blood.

Sir Leonard Rogers, who has specialized in fighting leprosy, noticed the resemblance between the germs of leprosy and of tuberculosis, and tried on his consumptive patients injections of sodium morrhuate, that worked well in leprosy. It is the salt obtained from the body of codfish, and has shown extraordinary results in leprosy and tuberculosis.

Knickerbockers are sensible, worn at the right time, but they are not for every female figure. In the North you see hundreds of young women in knickerbockers that remind you of the stone wall built by the honest farmer, "Three feet high, three feet wide," so that if it blows over it will be just the same. Some young ladies in knickerbockers would look about the same if they blew over. But why fine the poor creatures? Many are fining themselves to the value of one husband.

A woman, eighty, bobs her hair, partly because she is tired of hearing young people of fifty and sixty talking about it. Some of the youngsters consider an eighty-year-old "boyish bob" amusing. But many a woman of eighty is literally younger than the worn-out flapper of eighteen or thirty-eight. It's the youth in the eyes, not in the years, that counts.

Deaths

—Floyd Cady, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Cady of Inavale, died Aug. 21st. He was ill only three days. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon.

J. L. Jackson, a life long resident and merchant of Canandaigua, died at his home there, Aug. 21st. Mr. Jackson was born in Canandaigua 81 years ago in October, and except for a few years spent in school in the east had been a resident of that town.

Adams Chosen Amid Great Excitement

Written Specially for Andover News by Edward Percy Howard

When Henry Clay stepped from his carriage to interview the stricken candidate for the Presidency, Crawford, the contest had reached that pass where he came to look upon the Georgian with considerable favor. Clay unquestionably held the balance of power. He liked Crawford personally. They had spent many a jovial time over hot toddy and stacks of poker chips. Peculiarly it was a poker game that caused the bitterness between Adams and Clay. On one occasion Clay was holding a poker party in a hotel. Adams occupied the adjoining room. The Clay party grew boisterous and kept Adams awake until the small hours of the morning, for which Clay was then and afterwards denounced by Adams as a good-for-nothing roustabout.

Clay remained with Crawford for an hour. At the end of that time he was quite convinced that he was too ill, too shattered to warrant support for the Presidency. Had not Clay seen the condition of Crawford the latter probably would have become President of the United States, physically wretched and mentally weakened as he was. With Crawford eliminated—for he was to all intents and purposes eliminated after the Clay interview, the Jackson men had high hopes, believing Clay would not dare endorse an Eastern man. The Jackson men, however, suspected a strong dislike of Jackson by Clay and the practical politicians jumped into the fray with more than conscience. Mass meetings were called and resolutions quietly passed demanding the election of Jackson. Then came resolutions denouncing Clay for his reported support of Adams. Pamphlets, letters, protests poured into Washington like rain. Clay, shrewd politician, however, saw thru this backfire warfare and ignored it.

Then the Jackson men resorted to the methods of the blackmailer and the intimidator. The first thing they did was to send out a report that Clay had made a deal with Adams, selling his strength in return for a promise of the office of Secretary of State. Clay denounced the author of the story as a "dastard and a liar," but the story would not down. He demanded a congressional investigation, but the inquiry could not be overcome. The lie travelled on wings, while the truth crawled after it like a snail.

This situation revived the hopes of the followers of Crawford. They felt under the circumstances, that Clay could not possibly go to Adams and they were certain he would not go to Jackson. Moreover in the bitter end, Van Buren was in the ring for Crawford. As the day of election neared there were fears of riots, threats of bloodshed, even talk of revolution. No one knew what was in the mind of Clay. Washington had a population of 20,000. Every hotel in the city was bulging with people.

The custom was to nominate candidates for election thru caucus. The election was then decided by roll call of the House of Representatives. Each state delegation was instructed by its constituents to vote for the man selected by a majority of the people of that district. Thus the House of Representatives took on the appearance of a present-day political convention and the man selected by the majority became President.

As there was only one party when these five candidates ran, a nomination was the equivalent to election. But the meagerly attended caucus nomination of Crawford upset the political apple cart and threw the election into the House with every man having a free hand and an uncertain vote.

The hour of the roll call came. Clay, commanding, pale, mounted the Speaker's rostrum. Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut stood solidly for Adams. Massachusetts provided the bolter who voted for Jackson. The New Englander from Illinois by one vote. South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Indiana went solidly to Jackson. Delaware and Georgia stood like a rock for Crawford. Of course, the big struggle was for New York. Van Buren was for Crawford, but the decision of Clay prevented his winning the state. The vote stood Adams 18, Crawford 14, Jackson 2. The state went to Adams. Clay's western supporters then went to Adams who took Missouri, Ohio and Kentucky. This swing gave Adams 13 states. Jackson seven and Crawford 4. The contest was decided by the west. When the result was announced the halls rang with hisses coupled with the applause of the Adams supporters. The uproar in the galleries threatened to end in a riot. But in the midst of the uproar, Clay, majestic and calm, raised the gavel and let it fall with one bang. "Clear the galleries," he said. "We stand adjourned."

Sheriff Weir Gives His Version of Kemp Arrest

Sheriff J. W. Weir informs the News that our account of the arrest of Ralph Kemp in last week's News was not correct and did him injustice. "The News always wants to be fair. We have no desire to in any way leave a false impression in the minds of our readers of any man, and especially an officer of the law, and therefore hereby publish the story as told us by the sheriff himself."

Ralph Kemp was driving a team of horses on a heavy work wagon, toward Andover, on the new road. The sheriff and party in an automobile were going toward Wellsville. When about to meet the wagon the sheriff's car was driven to within four inches of the right hand edge of the pavement and nearly to a stop. Kemp drove by but so close to the sheriff's car that one whiffletree ticked a fender. Nothing was said until Kemp began to swear and curse the sheriff for not getting off the road. He called him a road hog and all of the other mean things he could lay his tongue to.

The sheriff, thinking to give the fellow a bit of fatherly advice, got out of the car and went to the man and asked, "How do you get that?" "I guess you do not know who you are talking to." He thereupon opened his coat and showed Kemp his badge, and informed him that he was the sheriff of Allegany county, and that Kemp was under arrest.

Then Kemp began to fight. He kicked the sheriff a terrific blow with his heavy shoe in the thigh, leaving a bruise that the sheriff will carry for days. Then Kemp picked up a stone some 4 by 8 inches in size and threatened to brain the sheriff. He said: "I don't give a who you are you can't arrest me."

Then the sheriff drew his gun and took the prisoner before Judge Bundy and preferred a charge against him of assault and resisting an officer.

Kemp got off most fortunately that he didn't get a year in state prison for assaulting an officer.

FAIR TIME FALL SHOES

Are now being displayed opposite Hotel Fassett. You will find this one of the greatest lines of fine footwear ever displayed in Wellsville, in our opinion. Not only because of the low price, but because of the style, fit and quality.

You may not need shoes now, but if possible, it would pay you to at least take a look at this wonderful fall line of BETTER SHOES—FOR LESS MONEY

Sampson Bros. shipped three car loads of hard wood lumber last week to a piano factory at Wasson, N. Y. The Corning auto club is doing all in their power to get a state road from Jasper to Andover called the "Cut-off." It would save eighteen miles by not going to Hornell. There can be a road over this ground with a very little grade and we are anxious to see it go.

McGinty—Taylor

Among the most charming of the midsummer weddings was that of Miss Cecelia L. V. McGinty, daughter of Mrs. Mary McGinty of No. 61 State street and Frederick M. Taylor of Leonia, N. J., which was celebrated at 8 o'clock August 20, 1924, at Saint Ann's church. Nuptial high mass was celebrated and the Rev. Francis J. Naughten officiated.

Miss Alice Butler of Hornell was bridesmaid and the bridegroom was attended by Emmett Dawson of Andover, a cousin of the bride. There was a large number of friends and relatives present. The bride was attired in a gown of white satin with lace and pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore an orchid colored gown of georgette with hat to match and carried Ophelia roses and sweet peas.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother and at the wedding breakfast there were thirty-five guests. Later Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will depart on a wedding trip after which they will make their home in Weehauken, N. J.

The bride is very well known here. She formerly taught advanced classes in music and drawing in the Hornell High School and has been supervisor of music and drawing at Mechanicsville, Cuba, Olean and last year at Union Hill, N. J.
