The air all about you is full of radio messages, but no matter how good your receiving outfit may be, you will hear nothing unless you tune it up and adjust it to the proper wave lengths.

The newspapers may be full of advertising messages but they are lost on you unless you READ them. You are reading this one. There will be others in this space, some serious, some with a kick like a mule, but all will be worth getting in touch with. Watch this space each week. In radio language "tune up" with us. You'll be interested.

George Oakley, "human fly," of Pasadena, Cal., died Aug. 31st at Chambersburg, Pa., of injuries received in a fall from the fourth story of a bank building August 30. ### To the Enrolled Voters of Allegany County

My attention has recently been directed to a circular addressed "To the Voters of Allegany County," and signed "By Order of Committee," which circular infers that if a candidate other than the one mentioned in the circular is elected, that the dry laws of the State and Nation will not be properly enforced. Ordinarily an anonymous communication which fails to disclose its author or the source from which it emanates is not one which appeals in any way to the fair minded voters and is not worthy of an answer. However, some voters who may not be personally acquainted with me and with my record in public office may be misled thereby. For the information of all citizens of Allegany County, I desire to publicly state that if I am nominated and elected Sheriff of Allegany County, I will to the best of my ability, fearlessly and impartially do all in my power to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and the Volstead Act, as well as all other laws of the State and Nation. Inference is also made that some candidate seeking the office of sheriff other than the one mentioned in the circular is representing a force opposed to the so called "Dry Vote of the County." I respectfully invite investigation of records of all candidates for the office of sheriff to determine whether or not my record in this regard will not compare as favorably as that of any other.

COMMUNITY NOTES

How the Country Newspaper or Weekly has Won

By ARTHUR WILSON EDDY

The eminent alienists and psychologists that we hear so much about, tell us (and our own self-knowledge confirms their statements) that there are two distinct sides to this interesting thing we call "human nature."

The first side is the one we inherited from our savage ancestors; the second is the structure built by civilization—by the teachings of our parents, of the church and of the constructive thinkers of the world.

The first side gets keen satisfaction from tearing down—from hunting with gun or with slander, from spite fences, from wars and rumors of wars; while the second side, worships at the shrine of home and peace and honest work, builds hospitals, supports the Red Cross and tries to practice the Golden Rule.

In its choice of reading matter the savage section of the mind demands the sordid details of disgrace, of wanton passion and bloody murder. It revels in the sensation and filth which it snatches hot from the lips of scandal mongers or from the presses of the sensational city newspapers.

The civilized chambers of the brain, on the other hand, are on friendly terms with Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Paul, with clean fiction, real humor and practical suggestions for better homes and more profitable business.

In its newspapers this civilized part of our mental equipment prefers news about friends and fellow townsmen. It eagerly scans such homely items as are now found in a "country" newspaper telling of the new automobiles, the picnics and the weddings, the new babies and the funerals in the homes of neighbors.

Bristow Adams calls these local daily and weekly newspapers "the chronicles of birth and love and death—the three great facts of man's existence." Certainly they are also the keystones of the right sort of spirit in a community.

Seldom is the R. F. D. carrier so welcome to the average farm household as on the day when he delivers the local weekly newspaper. Admittedly, the publication is generally homely when compared with the more sophisticated and wealthy metropolitan dailies, but it is an old friend, tried and true, who is indispensable to the average American.

home. Thus the medium of its news and advertising columns, its subscribers are interested in the activities of their community, the goings and comings, the joys and sorrows of their friends, and of the wars of the merchants with whom they trade.

Altho the city newspapers, influenced by the ever-changing conditions of the population centers, have passed thru a pronounced period of evolution, the average country weekly still retains its wholehearted devotion to the welfare of the region in which it is published. It remains distinctively an American institution infrequently bringing riches to its owner but often a satisfaction of having rendered a genuine service to "his people."

American Missionaries In Danger

Two American women remained in Liuhoo, China, during the recent bombardment of the city. They were Miss Grace I. Crandall, a woman physician, and Miss Susie M. Burdick, who were in charge of the Seventh Day Baptist Mission Hospital there.

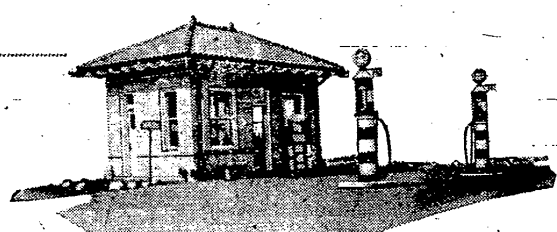

When the firing began the Red Cross unit from Shanghai retreated twelve miles, to the village of Luti, but Miss Crandall and Miss Burdick refused to abandon the patients in the hospital who were not war casualties.

All day long the shells whistled overhead. Several of them passed thru the hospital building. Late in the day the Associated Press correspondent obtained an automobile truck and by using the truck and his own automobile managed to remove the patients, together with the American women, to safety in Shanghai. The rain of bullets continued, however, while the escape from the hospital was being effected.

Miss Crandall, whose home is in Milton, Wisconsin and Miss Burdick, both graduates of Alfred University, have been connected for many years with the mission hospital and the Grace School for Girls at Liuhoo, the former as a medical missionary, and the latter as a teacher and nurse.

Dr. Rosa Palmberg, also of Milton, Wis., is head of the hospital. Miss Burdick has been with the S. D. Baptist Mission in China for twenty years and Miss Crandall fifteen. Their bravery is being widely recognized and commended by the public press. Both are well known by many Andover residents.
