MACHINE TO DRESS CODFISH

Iron Splitter Does the Work of Seventy-Five Men in the Grand Banks.

Out on the foggy grand banks the most arduous task of the cod fisherman is "dressing down." Every one dreads it, for it means working regardless of hours until the job is done. If the catch has been heavy midnight, or even the dawn following, sees the entire crew hard at it by the light of flares. No one, not even the cook, commonly known while aloft as "the doctor," may have any respite, says the Scientific American. The deck is slippery with parts of the thousands of cod that have been slid from the knife of the slitters into the hold. Cut fingers are of no avail as an excuse for laying off.

Power has taken a lot of the meanness out of life at sea and the same little gasoline engine that hoists the sails and weighs the anchor will now have more to do—and the crew less. The "iron splitter" does the work of 60 to 75 men who now wield sharp knives on the grand banks off Newfoundland, up along the Labrador, as well as in the localities frequented by Fishermen from France, England and Scandinavia.

Every second the new machine takes a fresh codfish and as often it turns out a dressed fish. It performs all the usual operations of splitting, removing the backbone, cleaning and washing. This ingenious machine was perfected in Seattle, Wash., by the company which perfected, in 1905, a somewhat similar machine called by fishermen "the iron Chink," because it took the place of thousands of Chinese who were formerly employed to clean fish in the salmon canneries of the north Pacific.

ENGLAND'S HISTORIC WAY

Dover Road Recalls the March of Caesar's Legions Across Barham Downs.

Dover road—England's historic highway—is 70 1/2 miles long measured from its ancient starting place, the south end of London bridge, to Dover cliff. An hour's journey over the Dover road is an excursion into 2,000 years of history and centuries of English poetry and romance, says the Detroit News.

In his book, "The Dover Road," Charles G. Harper says, "Caesar's presence haunts the weird plateau of Barham downs, and the alert imagination hears the tramp of the legionaries along Watling street on moonlit nights. Shades of Britons, Saxons, Danes and Normans people the streets of the old towns through which the highway takes its course or crowd in warlike array upon the hillsides."

"Kings and queens, nobles, saints of different degrees of sanctity, great blackguards and ecclesiastics—holy, naughty, proud or pitiful rise up before one to terrify with thoughts of the space the record of their doings would occupy; in fine, the wraiths and phantoms of high upon 2,000 years combine to intimidate the historian."

We guarantee our job printing to please.

Ode to Skeptics

Tell us not in mournful numbers Advertising is the bunk. For the business man who slumbers Soon finds trade is mighty punk.

A rubbing post wrapped in burlap saturated with crude oil or crank-case drainings will keep the porters in comfort during the summer months with protection from lice.

Uncle Ab says country life is the best only when those who live it think so.

A well kept lawn makes home a more attractive place to anyone, but particularly to the people that live there.

The fashion of bobbing the hair has been in vogue for several years, but many women are just having it done. Were they all this time making up their minds?

"Let's Buy Some New Furniture"

IF YOU'VE thought it often. Why not turn thoughts into action? The things that make home livable and lovable are not expensive. Fine furniture does not mean fancy prices—not at this store.

And the joy of the new is not merely the joy of the now! Our quality furniture will still be new when the new generation arrives.

The Romance of Furniture

THE high-boy, a chest of drawers of English origin, became one of the most popular articles of furniture during colonial days.
