OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

SHORT WINTER COURSES TO OPEN SOON AT AG. COLLEGE

Advice Early Registration for Students Planning on Work in Specialized Courses; Enrollment Limited.

The short winter courses of the state college of agriculture at Ithaca will open November 5, with registration at the office of the secretary of the college. Six courses are open to students wishing to take the work; general agriculture, dairy industry, poultry husbandry, fruit growing and vegetable gardening.

A student may register in only one course; and a practice that has been followed in past years is to take the general agricultural work one winter and then come back to specialize in the line that appeals to the particular person the following year.

Advices from the different departments giving the specialized courses indicate that there is a likelihood of their being crowded this winter, and that it would be wise for prospective students to send in their applications early. Full information about the winter courses may be obtained by writing the secretary of the college of agriculture at Ithaca. He will send to anyone interested a copy of the winter course announcement, which gives a list of the various subjects offered, as well as information about the cost of living in Ithaca and the total expense liable to be incurred during the three month's stay. Tuition is free to all residents of New York state, the students from out of the state must pay $25.

Authorities at the college feel that they are giving thru the winter courses the most practical type of instruction possible, and that it is probably the best investment of time that many farmers and farmers' sons can make during the fall and winter months.

Around Our House

Split heads of cabbage will make the good old-fashioned sauerkraut that is getting so much new-fashioned publicity these days. Broken heads of cabbage won't keep well in storage, but as sauerkraut they will add vitamins and flavor to many a meal. A good stone crock, a pound of salt, a wooden mallet, and the inclination will make sauerkraut.
Shred the cabbage finely. A vegetable slicer would be a handy purchase for this. Place a layer of the cabbage in the crock and tamp it down well around the edges. Salt well, using about a pound to a 40 gallon crock of kraut and pounding the cabbage until it begins to look juicy. Keep adding cabbage and salt and pounding until the jar is full. Cover with well washed cabbage-leaves and a close-fitting earthen or wooden cover well weighted down and tie a cheesecloth over the top to keep the dirt out. Let the kraut stand in a fairly warm place (about 55 degrees Fahrenheit is right) for four to six weeks, when bubbles should stop rising to the top, and the kraut should be cured, tho a warmer place will cure it sooner.

Cured sauerkraut may be canned simply by packing it in jars without water. Cover as for canning and cook in a water bath for an hour—or for thirty minutes under pressure.

Homespun Yarn

Mother nature sees that the frost is on the pumpkin, but we have to see that the corn is in the shock.

Reading lamps arranged to shine on the book instead of the eyes will make long winter evenings more pleasant.

If frosts have not been too severe, some of the tag-ends of the garden may still be canned in soup and salad mixtures. These are among the handiest canned foods in the house.

It's a good idea to get the smell of moth balls out of winter clothes and give them a good airing on these last sunny days, so that when winter comes (as it always does,) we'll be ready for it.

Have you thot of making a grape catsup of some of these last grapes?
It's a close rival of the tomato variety. The state college of agriculture at Ithaca will send you a recipe if you haven't one.

Try pinning handkerchiefs, collars and other small pieces to a tape and pin this to the line on wash day. It will save cold fingers in fall weather and much time searching these small articles out of the general melee.

A few sprays of bittersweet, if gathered before frost, give a bit of cheer to the house in the winter.
Tensels may be very beautiful, too, if placed in the right spot. Bulletin H 85 from the state college of agriculture at Ithaca tells many things about plant decorations.

"An Hour a Day Makes Studying Pay." That's the slogan of the New York farmers who are taking free correspondence courses from the state college of agriculture at Ithaca. Ask about them on a postal.

FARMERS WHO POST LAND ABLE TO ENJOY OWN GAME

Notices 40 Rods Apart Will Warn Trappers That Hunting and Fishing are not Allowed.

Farmers wishing to post their land may do so in accordance with the 1924 game laws by placing notices or signs every forty rods along the boundary lines of the land.

These signs have to be at least a foot square and must be at every corner of the boundary; where the line runs along a creek or river, they must be erected along the bank illegible or destroyed signs are to be replaced at least once a year during the months of March, July, August or September.

The notice must bear the name and address of the person doing the posting and the following is all that is necessary to put on the sign: "Private lands. All persons are warned against hunting or fishing hereon or trespassing hereon for these purposes," altho other forms of notice that convey the same meaning are also legal.

Many farmers feel that they have helped feed the game during the year, and that when the open season on pheasants, squirrels and other kinds of small game comes they wish to enjoy some sport themselves rather than watch others get all the game. Likewise, unpleasant incidents are continually reported of careless hunters who leave gates open, break down fences, and shoot or scare domestic animals. Posting the land protects the farmer against that sort of thing.

NEW YORK HOGS IN DANGER FROM CHOLERA

Disease Constantly Present in Many Localities Makes Immunization Advisable and Economical.

Hog cholera is menacing the swine of New York state, and it has been reported from many localities in the state. Contrary to the common belief, Dr. R. R. Birch of the New York Veterinary College at Ithaca says that the disease is in reality, well established in this state, and is not primarily a corn-belt disease.

He says that another misconception is that it is necessarily a chronic malady which wears its victim down almost to a skeleton before killing him. Chronic hog cholera occurs sometimes, he says, but as a matter of fact most cases are acute in nature, and hogs sometimes die of it very suddenly, tho usually the animal is sick several days before death takes place. Prominent symptoms are dullness, fever, chilling, constipation followed by diarrhea, running eyes and drooping ears.

Dr. Birch claims that in New York state most herds become infected thru feeding on garbage or from contact with exposed or sick animals. Pork trimmings from carcasses which have passed inspection as being fit for human food may still contain enough of the virus to infect a hog. Accordingly, all garbage-fed hogs, as well as those that are shown at fairs or are otherwise likely to come in contact with other hogs, should be immunized.

Anti-hog cholera serum is relatively safe and highly effective as a preventive, tho not a cure. If used on the well animals as soon as the cholera appears in the herd, most of them will be saved. Any delay in treatment will make more deaths liable.

"A stitch in time saves nine," says Dr. Birch, and anyone suspecting hog cholera or feeding garbage or showing his stock at fairs should lose no time in having his herd immunized or at least talk it over with his veterinarian.

Agriographs

According to the best figures at hand, a tool in the shed is worth about one and a quarter out under an apple tree.

Refilling a silo generally means that from two to five more tons can be put in after the first filling has settled.

Trimming out fence-corners with a sythe has rather undeservedly become a lost art in many sections of the country.

Uncle Ab says that the best farmers most always take time to put on the few extra touches that really finish a job.
