Robinson Crusoe didn't

quit

One of the most persistent advertisers in the history of success was Robinson Crusoe. He knew what he wanted—a ship -and he put up an ad for one. He flung a shirt on a pole at the top of his island; that, in the language of the sea, was plain to every sea-faring

The circulation was small—there was no other medium but Crusoe kept at it, despite the fact that he got no inquiries for a long time. He changed his copy-as one garment after another was frayed out—and in the end got what he wanted.

Suppose Crusoe had taken down that signal after a time and declared "Advertising doesn't pay." Where would he and his story be now?

Put up your signal and keep it there. Crusoe advertised under very discouraging circumstances. You've got a sure thingis only necessary to have the patience, persistence, and pluck of Robinson Crusoe-and the good ship "Better Business" will soon tie up 'longside your pier.—Exchange.

It would be narrow vision indeed to rejoice in the movement of freight as great trains go back and forth across the country carrying grain, livestock, poultry and farm products to seaboard markets—and in return bringing manufactured goods to inland consumers. Such activity means prosperity to the nation; more business; better markets; peace and plenty.

Unless this community takes all necessary steps to be part of that activity, however, the day cannot be evaded when Andover will be nothing more than a whistling post.

Marketing the things you have to sell and buying your necesstities, luxuries and pleasures right here in Andover is the method whereby we can evade a whistling post indentity and insure increased values in our farm and town property; more jobs; better pay and a more prosperous people.

For every case of freight which comes to Andover this year; or every car shipment sent out, there should be two next year. If we establish that goal and work toward it then town growth is assured. We have every natural asset needed right here in Andover. So it is purely a matter of resolve and a pulling together to that end.
