"Yes, yes, go on," we encouraged.

"What I mean is that harping on dancing, for instance, never stopped many people from dancing and all the notoriety about its 'indecencies' is tertainly not giving a better of more uplifting that too the nation."

I had listened intently to what Lob was saying when I saw something that took me apart from the conversation.

Curtiss Wright was sitting next to us, at a little table.

His back was turned, but he must have overheard the entire talk. He could have moved his head an inch and acknowledged our presence... But no... He was paying the waiter and leaving the table.

He entered a telephone booth and then came back to the door, spoke to the head waiter and departed.

"By jove," exclaimed Bob, wasn't that Curtiss Wright just leaving?" He addressed me for Ted and Marj were both dancing.

"Uh-hum," I nodded.
"I wish I could have hailed him and made him join our party. He's your father's guest, isn't he, Sallie?"

Once more I nodded.

"Sea much of king?"

He was chairman of the Harding Agricultural Commission and was chosen to head the House Sub-committee on Agriculture when the present system of handling budgets was inaugurated four years ago. Representative Anderson is recognized as one of the foremost experts on national agriculture in the United States, in or out of Congress. To continue his study along this line, it is reported that he will leave congress at the end of his precent term.
