THREE THINGS

Gabriel Wells had a Christmas card in which he French Vanilla, Fresh Strawberry, Fresh Orange, says that there are three things that constitute a rounded out life: Power, Pleasure and Peace.

The more we think of it the more this seems to be al very good definition.

There is not much satisfaction in a life of no power. What gives zest to sport is the employment of our powers and we all applaud the victor, that is, the man who shows the most power. This includes both mentality or $1.25 Box of Durands, Schraffts' or Diggetts shows the most power. This includes both mentality or mental acumen and skill.

As for pleasure, they have learned a great lesson! who have found out the abiding pleasures of life are' those that come from serving others. The pleasures that we experience in merely receiving gifts or benefits, merely enjoying things that are our own, the pleasures of possession and amusement are temporary and they fade.

But one who devotes his life to bringing joy into the lives of others has an unfailing source of satisfaction.

Peace comes from the firm establishment or connection of life with certain fixed principles. There are some things which, when we have decided upon them, we lay on the shelf. They are not to be reopened. One who is |7 continually arguing the fundamentals is always in hot water and unsatisfied.

That is the advantage of a belief in God. It is something fixed and settled, a central sun about which all of our other thoughts and opinions may revolve.

may take many forms, but it must have a central core of repose. A life without inner repose is constantly buffeted to and fro by contrary passions.

One who has power sufficient to enjoy his ability to overcome obstacles, who takes pleasure in giving pleassure to others, and who has inner repose enough to keep! him content in the center of his being, can be truly said to live a somewhat complete life.
