WHAT A GIRL IN HER TEENS SHOULD DO FOR GOOD HEALTH.
By AMELIA H. GRANT, M.A., R.N.

"HIGH HEELS"—A PAIN IN THE BACK
MANY bodily pains and much ill health among women of today can be traced to the character of the shoes they wear. Pains in the thighs and the small of the back are frequently due to high heels. In fact, girlhood and womanhood in general would be healthier and happier if there were no high heel shoes.
The sensible girl will stick to the Cuban or military heel, because this type will enable her to use her feet properly. She will wear shoes that fit—not those which cramp or pinch any part of her foot. Comfort and ease are always preferable to so-called style and suffering.
The fact that high heels cause a shortening of the large tendon at the back of the foot and ankle accounts for most of the painful foot trouble among women. Often the pain is localized in the small of the back, in the thighs, leading the sufferer to believe she has lumbago, sciatica or arthritis, when the real trouble is thoughtlessness in the selection of footwear or a wilful violation of the known rules of health.

WHO STOLE THE CORN?
Quick Ears had lingered near the fireside of his neighbor long after sunset, and as he passed the corn crib near the entrance of his bark-covered lodge, he heard the thieves gnawing on the under side of the storage place of his corn.
So the next day he looked into his corn crib, and sure enough, something was pulling the corn thru the bottom of the crib. To trap the thieves he took some sharp-edged stones and poured maple syrup on them and sprinkled ground corn meal over each of the moistened stones. Then he placed these meal covered stones in the bottom of the corn crib.
The next day he found that the thieves had tried to eat the corn-covered stones, and he noticed small drops of blood on the ground. He noticed, too, tracks in the snow of the little feet of the thieves.
He followed the footprint trail into the woods, and came finally to a hollow tree but could see nothing of the thieves.
Many moons passed, and the thieves no longer came to the corn crib, but when Quick Ears looked at the mouths of all the animals he met, he came upon the culprits, who ever afterwards had split lips as mementos of those days when they tried to steal the corn from the bottom of the crib.
That is the way Mr. Rabbit got his split lip, according to the red man, as he still tells this story by the winter fireside.
