The Family Doctor

The Expected Arrival

I write this letter at a time when every couple of moderate means or, perhaps less, are looking with a per cent of apprehension on the coming visit of the old stork. Adult garments are being made over into dainty baby-clothes, and conferences are being held as to how to obtain the best and safest service for the least possible outlay of money.

The young father with a $30 a week salary, probably engages hospital service, that will put him two years in arrears with his meager income—but he loves his dear ones. The hospital two weeks, special nurse one week, operating room, and the specialist in obstetrics—they all cost, you know—but he loves, and wants the best. His credit is good, but it may be "the beginning of the end" for him financially.

The humbler couple cannot even think of a hospital service. They engage the family doctor several months in advance. He knows of a nurse who came within a few months of graduating; she is capable and will work for a fraction of the sum required to hire a registered nurse. She needs the work, and will do her utmost. The home is prepared for the event. Antiseptics, dressings, a sanitary bed—all are arranged under the guidance of the family doctor.

"Mother and babe doing well," reports the home paper next day. The parents get out of it with the minimum of expense—maybe have little left, if they have "saved up" as they should have done months in advance.

I wish we all were well-to-do, but wishes do not get us very far these days when it takes action to get results. My readers may get something out of this talk—I hope so.

The gas ignited with an explosion that took out a portion of the cellar wall and ripped up his sidewalk. Upon examination it was found that the Empire Gas Co.'s line, which runs directly under Mr. Robinson's sidewalk had become defective and allowing gas to escape, which, because of the snow and ice, had followed thru into the cellar instead of going up thru the ground.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates, Cornell (Copyright 1932)

SLEEPING LEAVES

The sky was clear and the trails were frozen so hard that the children's moccasins gave a merry squeak as they went to gather at the bark cabin of Shongo, wise old man of the Senecas. Gladly he dropped his task of moccasin-making to greet the children; he brought forth an apple for each child, for Shongo always collected more than a supply for his family for he knew children liked juicy wild apples in midwinter.

He cut one of the apples in half and showed the children the little brown seeds, which, he explained, were the beginnings of big apple trees. He told them how the crafty tree used its roots to capture the warm spring rains to bring out the leaves, and how the leaves helped the pink-white blossoms hang ripe apples on the tree at the time of the autumn moon.

"But, grandfather," spoke up one of the boys, "it would take a long time for one of those little seeds to be a great big tree. And where are the leaves to make apples next autumn?"

With a twinkle in his eye, Shongo replied, "The leaves are now sleeping on the tree."

The children laughed, for who ever saw green leaves on an apple tree in midwinter, and the grandfather told them to come back the next day and he would explain the secret.

That eventide, grandfather pushed on his long moccasins and took the trail to the wild apple orchard. He cut off a twig and brought it back to his cabin. So early the next day, when the children returned, he cut thru the bud on the end of the twig with his stone knife. And sure enough, right in their tiny brown wigwag were five little green leaves all curled up, just sleeping, until the warm spring rain would wake them.

A TEST OF GENIUS

The shortest verse in the New Testament is "Jesus wept." That tragic note in his story the Gospel record has carefully preserved. How we wish it might also have told us what occurred on the night after the chronic old grumbler was healed at the river. Did Jesus stop suddenly in the middle of the supper, and set down his cup, while a broad smile spread across his wonderful face? If he did the disciples were probably puzzled—they were so often puzzled—but surely we have the reverent right to guess what was in his mind, as he pictured the homecoming of that cured old man. On that evening surely Jesus must have laughed.

Some one has said that genius is the ability to become a boy again at will. Lincoln had that type of genius. Around his table in Washington sat the members of his cabinet silenced by their overwhelming sense of responsibility. It was one of the most momentous meetings in our history. To their amazement instead of addressing himself directly to the business in hand, Lincoln picked up a volume and began to read aloud a delightful chapter of nonsense from Artemus Ward.

Frequent chuckles interrupted the reading, but they came only from the President. The secretaries were too shocked for expression! Humor at such an hour—it was well nigh sacrilegious! Heedless of their protesting looks, Lincoln finished the chapter, closed the book and scanned their gloomy faces with a sigh.

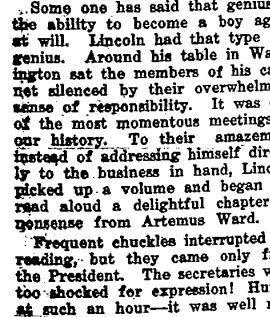

"Gentlemen, why don't you laugh?" he exclaimed. "With the fearful strain that is upon me night and day, if I did not laugh I should die; and you need this medicine as much as I."

With that remark he turned to his tall hat which was on the table and drew forth what Secretary Stanton described as a "little white paper."

The "little white paper" was the Emancipation Proclamation.

Stanton could hardly restrain his impulse to walk out of the room. No one of his cabinet really understood Lincoln. He was constantly scandalizing them by his calm disregard of convention, and his seemingly prodigal waste of time. The friends and advisers of Jesus were similarly shocked. How could any one with such important business allow himself to be so casually interrupted to heal a self-pitying old man at the river! One of the surest marks of greatness, of course, is accessibility, and the appearance of having an unstinted allowance of time. "Extreme busyness is a symptom of deficient vitality," says Stevenson. The disciples were extremely busy, Judas most of all. He was the treasurer of the group, harassed because expenses ran high and there was no certainty of tomorrow's income. Jesus brushed away such petty worries with a smile.

"Consider the lilies of the field," he exclaimed, "they toil not neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

More than half of the dairy record club members say their records have enabled them to get more milk from their best cows, and nearly 70 per cent say they saved grain on their poorer cows.
